Last-Minute Arms Rushed To Vietnam

Times News Services

SAIGON — The United States is rushing millions of dollars worth of military supplies to South Vietnam in a crash program to beat the signing of a ceasefire agreement.

For the first time, the South Vietnamese are getting four-engine C-130 transport planes.

Both the U.S. command and the 7th Air Force refused to discuss the military aid program. But informed sources said it goes well beyond the equipment originally planned for the Vietnamization schedule.

The draft peace agreement, which calls for withdrawal of all American troops from Vietnam within 60 days of signing, stipulates that the United States can replace existing military equipment only on a one-to-one basis with weapons of the same characteristics under international supervision.

Anticipating the agreement will be signed soon, the Pentagon is sending scores of transports into Saigon from bases in the United States carrying military equipment including armored personnel carriers and Chinook helicopters.

Five of the C-130s, the work horse of the Vietnam war, arrived at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Air Base today. They were the first to be turned over to the South Vietnamese air force.

On the battlefront, North Vietnamese troops and tanks overran another border camp in the central highlands today as both South and North Vietnamese fought to expand their territorial control before a ceasefire.

The South Vietnamese reported nearly 150 Communist attacks during the 24 hours ending at dawn and said it was the largest number recorded in any 24-hour period of the war. But many of them were small-scale rocket and mortar barrages.

The Duc Co border camp was the third frontier base overrun in the highlands in less than a month. Scores of rangers were reported to have escaped. But the fate of 60 men who had been wounded in the fighting was not known.

Hanoi gave its first unofficial sign Wednesday that Le Duc Tho would be prepared to meet again with presidential adviser Henry Kissinger to discuss a settlement.

This clue came in an Agence France-Presse report quoting well informed sources in Hanoi as saying that the North Vietnamese government would not be opposed to a further meeting between the two negotiators.

This first sign that Hanoi had relented in its insistence that the agreement was complete came at the same time as a charge that the United States was seeking to "gain a position of strength in the negotiations."

This seemed to back up reports, also confirmed in Washington, that the United States is seeking assurances from North Vietnam that there will be some pullback of its forces in the south.

So far there has been no overt indication that North Vietnam was making any gestures that would signal a willingness to withdraw. Nor was it indicating that it would meet another key demand which U.S. sources said is being made to link cease-fires in Cambodia and Laos closely

It's 109 Each!

Unsuccessful Liberals in Monday's election are cleaning up shop on Parliament Hill. At left, Lloyd Francis, beaten in the riding of Ottawa-West, has a few words outside the Parliament Hill, barbershop with former Ottawa-East MP Jean Richard who did not run. At right, Murray McBride, who lost in Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton, cleans out his office with his secretary's help.

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Luc Pepin, industry and commerce minister, today was declared elected in Drummond riding with a five-vote margin, giving the Liberals 109 seats in the Commons and tying them with the Progressive Conservatives.

The revised result was announced by Drummond returning officer Lucien Gamache.

PM Announces Plans Tonight

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau will announce the future of his Liberal government in a televised address today at 5 p.m. PST.

His "crystal clear" decision, as he put it, was to follow day-long cabinet meetings. The cabinet also convened Wednesday for three and a half hours.

Trudeau adjourned the meeting for lunch about 1 p.m. today and announced: "We're in such a good mood we're meeting at 2:15 this afternoon.

Asked how he felt, he replied "I'm hungry."

As the cabinet met today indications were that members were sharply split on the question of whether they should resign or try to carry on.

At least three—Supply Minister James Richardson, Environment Minister Jack Davis and Pat Mahoney, minister without portfolio who went down to defeat in Calgary South—said Wednesday they felt the government should stay in office.

Others were non-commital but none suggested openly that the government should step down.

Asked today if he felt a "crisis" existed due to the closeness of the election, Trudeau replied: "We're used to having crisis—that's what the whole government is about."

At one point, crushed in the throng of newsmen as he headed for the cabinet meeting, Trudeau snapped: "Hey look, I'm still the prime minister . . . don't push me like that."

Trudeau had scheduled a press conference for Wednesday but it was cancelled when he concluded he was not ready to make a declaration of his intentions at that time.

Members of the cabinet from Quebec were reported to be arguing that Trudeau should hang on to power and convene the Commons.

PM Had 'Wrong Advisers'

EDMONTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau must be prepared to appear before a national Liberal convention and defend his policies, a defeated MP said today.

Hu Harries, who lost his seat in Edmonton Strathcona as part of an overwhelming Liberal defeat in Alberta, said today Trudeau has "been listening to the wrong people."

He charged that Ivan Head, Trudeau's chief adviser for Alberta, is completely out of touch with the situation in the province. The prime minister "should get rid of" the advisers who have been giving him incorrect readings.

Harries said he and seven other Alberta Liberal candidates — all beaten resoundingly as the Conservatives swept the 19 seats and dumped two Liberal cabinet

He Wanted Free Trip To Tokyo

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) Fumiama, the man who claimed to be a former soldier of the Japanese army in the Second World War, appears to be a Chinese-Indonesian who wanted a free trip to Tokyo, a witness who met him in Bali said today.

The witness said "the man does not have a single shred of evidence to prove that he has been a former Japanese soldier."

Fumiama did not know the oath of a Japanese soldier and his Indonesian was far more fluent than his Japanese, the witness said.

Balinese who know Fumiama said he is an Indonesian who has been living with a poor peasant family in a tiny village on Bali.

Early this week, Fumiama told the national news agency Antara that he was a soldier of the Japanese army and had been living in Bali for 27 years.

REFS SWORN OFF

DERBY, England (UPI) — The men who referee women's soccer games have had enough. The ladies' language is too much for them.

"The trouble is that some of the ladies do not behave like ladies," said Frank Hardwood, secretary of the 35-member Derby District Referees Society. "The language can be quite startling."

He said the society is going to train women to referee women's matches from now on.

"Although the ladies' keeness is commendable," he said, "referees who officiate at their matches rarely want to do so again."

Anita Mozeley, secretary of the Ladies' Sunday (Soccer) League, admitted things got pretty tough when the girls took to the field.

B.C. Pension Funds To Get Better Deal

Pension funds for teachers, provincial and municipal civil servants will now be able to get a better return on their money.

Funds will now be able to seek interest of up to half a percentage point above the CPP rate.

Barrett said the fund could now receive a "fair return" for investments made in the government-guaranteed sphere.

The move settles a long argument caused by former Premier W. A. C. Bennett's pegging of the interest rates to a lower amount in order to more easily finanec the huge power projects of the Peace and Columbia rivers.

One of Bennett's constant critics on the matter, Liberal Pat McGeer, said in Vancouver the teachers and civil servant funds were "captive" funds" under Bennett.

He argued over a number of years that hydro should be forced to seek money on the open market and that the pension funds should not be forced into paying for power projects.

Schools and hospitals were made the "whipping boys" for the high cost of power dam construction, McGeer said.

The tying of the interest rates to the CPP rates was done in April, 1970, after several years of heavy financing of power projects.

The NDP government's cabinet order rescinded the 1970 move. Barrett said today before entering cabinet that he expected a "companion" order in council would likely be passed today and released tomorrow.

NEWS BRIEFS

U.S. Prices Dip

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Wholesale prices in the United States fell 0.2 per cent last month, the first drop in 13 months, the U.S. labor department reported today.

Commandos to Go

TRIPOLI, Libya—Palestinian commandos involved in the Munich Olympics killings and the two guerrillas who freed them by threatening to blow up a hijacked West German airliner Sunday are expected to leave Libya soon, government sources said Wednesday.

Probe Demanded

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon demanded Wednesday night a royal commission investigation into a report that a $50,000 donation was made by a Toronto land developer to the provincial Progressive Conservative party last year.

Missionary Safe

COURTENAY (CP) — The father of a missionary captured by the Pathet Lao in Laos said today negotiations are going on to obtain the release of his son, Lloyd Oppel, and a companion, Sam Mattix of Centralia, Wash. Magnus Oppel also said that fears are mounting that two other missionaries captured Friday along with his son and Mattix are dead.

Four Hell's Angels Arrested

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — Four Hell's Angels have been taken into custody and authorities say more arrests are possible in connection with the discovery of three bodies on a remote ranch rumored to be a burial ground for the motorcycle gang.

Those arrested Wednesday were identified as William Mark (Zoro) Mitten, 32; Edward Junior Carter, 24; Chester (Festds) Green, 29, and William John Moran, 38.

Contra Costa County officials said the four were being held in the San Francisco Bay area county for investigation of murder.

"We have good cause to believe the suspects in the Contra Costa jail are linked with the Mendicino investigation and there is good cause to believe the crimes occurred in Contra Costa County," said District Attorney William O'Malley. "More arrests are possible."

Meanwhile, George Wethern, 33, and his wife Helen, 29, owners of the 153-acre ranch where the bodies of two men and a woman were unearthed from old well holes, rejected Wednesday an offer of immunity from further prosecution if they would provide information concerning Hell's Angels activities in the area.

"It wasn't broad enough they didn't offer what we feel was sufficient," said public defender Joseph Allen of the offer by Mendicino County authorities.

Wethern, a burly 260-pounder, and his wife—both former Hell's Angels—were arrested on charges of possession and sale of drugs Monday when deputies went to their ranch to dig.

Allen said authorities particularly want information from the Wetherns on Hell's Angels leader Sonny Barger, 34, and others who are on trial with Barger in Oakland on charges of killing a suspected narcotics dealer last May.

Six witnesses are said to be missing in the trial.

PARIS, BONN HIKE RATES

Times News Services

In Paris, France raised its rate to 6.5 from 5.75 per cent and Bonn increased its bank rate to 4 from 3½ per cent.

British Capture IRA Guerrillas

BELFAST (AP) — A battalion of British troops swept into a Roman Catholic district of Belfast late Wednesday night and captured a suspected cadre of Irish Republican Army guerrillas.

Army headquarters said they believed an IRA battalion commander, three other officers and four active gunmen were seized.

POWERFUL N-TEST

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — The Uppsala Seismology Institute registered a very strong Soviet nuclear test today equal in strength to the American blast in the Aleutian Islands a year ago, Prof. Marcus Baath of the institute reported.

Baath said the explosion occurred in the Siberian test area and had a strength of about five megatons and a Richter magnitude of 7.1.

Russia's Far-Flung Navy Linked by Satellites

New York Times

MOSCOW — Indications mounted Wednesday that the Soviet Union may be deploying a worldwide system of data relay satellites linking its wide-flung naval forces with Moscow.

For the fifth time in the last 30 months, the Russians Wednesday launched a set of eight satellites with a single carrier rocket as part of its Cosmos series, a general designation for a wide range of civilian and military unmanned space activities. The last eight-payload cluster was launched in July.

Western specialists on the Soviet space program have found increasing evidence that the Soviet program of eight-payload shots is designed to provide a global military communications system similar to one tested over the last six years by the U.S. air force. Since the only worldwide military activities of the Soviet Union are those of its navy, the Soviet eight-satellite system is believed to be used primarily for naval communications.

As usual in the Cosmos program, the Soviet announcement gave no indication of the purpose of the new satellites. The announcement by Tass said merely that the cluster had been placed in a high circular orbit, 928 miles at its highest point and 854 miles at its lowest, and inclined at an angle of 74 degrees to the earth's equator. The satellites were completing an orbit every 114 minutes.

These are the characteristics of a series of octet launchings that began in April, 1970, and were then hailed by the Russians as the world's first flight of eight payloads with a single-launch vehicle.

Nixon Starts Final Spurt

WASHINGTON (CP-AP) — President Nixon will discuss the future of the country in a country-wide television address tonight, a day after Senator George McGovern told the biggest crowd of his political career he believes Americans want the country "to follow higher moral standards."

The president announced plans for a closing blitz in his campaign for re-election. There will be another television speech Monday, and campaign trips Friday and Saturday to six states — Oklahoma, North Carolina, Rhode Island, New Mexico, California and Illinois.

Even though the polls show Nixon with a wide margin over McGovern, press secretary Ronald Ziegler said: "The president is not taking any state for granted."

McGovern, Democratic nominee for president, said at a rally in New York City that "the American people in their own way are saying something that may sound old-fashioned . . . they want this country to follow higher moral standards."

The crowds that turned out Wednesday to cheer the senator revived the flagging spirits of some of the candidates' staff, dispirited by opinion polls showing him 23 percentage points or more behind Nixon.

Police estimated about 100,000 people lined the streets of Manhattan for McGovern's motorcade and rally.

Shootout Foils Holdup

WINNIPEG (CP) — Four robbery suspects were wounded in a hail of gunfire today when police, acting on a tip, interrupted a getaway attempt from a downtown credit union holdup.

Two of the four were said to be in serious condition in hospital.

The shooting began when police closed in on the rear door of the Cross town Credit Union office at 171 Donald St.

One suspect was dropped near the doorway. Two others made it to their parked getaway car where the fourth man was waiting but it crashed into a back-alley fence as police fired on the vehicle.

Police said no officers or bystanders were hurt in the gunfire but refused further comment immediately.

Mrs. Nina Wakshinski, who works in a travel agency office on the second floor of the building, said she was almost hit by bullets crashing through a window.

Indications were the police were staked out in a vehicle parked nearby.

Sheila Adam, another employee of the travel service, said she looked into the alley after the shooting started and saw three men carrying rifles and dressed like construction workers.

She first thought they were robbery suspects but as the scene unfolded she discovered they were police.

Cass-Beggs' Tenure 'Costly for Manitoba'

WINNIPEG (CP) — David Cass-Beggs, a figure of controversy as Manitoba Hydro chairman, prompted more argument with the announcement Wednesday of his plans to leave for a top job in British Columbia.

Premier Ed Schreyer said Cass-Beggs had given the people of Manitoba a "wide and important measure" of service," particularly in his advice on the massive Nelson River power development.

Cass-Beggs, who was named chairman of Manitoba Hydro in 1970, will leave that post Dec. 15 to become a director of the B.C. Hydro and its chairman Jan. 1.

The Conservative Hydro critic in the Manitoba legislature, Donald Craik, reacted to the announcement by saying Cass-Beggs' tenure here has been "a very costly mistake for Manitoba."

PROBLEMS REMAIN

He said the 64-year-old Cass-Beggs, who was general manager of Saskatchewan Power Corp. before coming to Manitoba, hasn't solved the basic problems facing Manitoba Hydro and the province's NDP government.

"Now that he's made key decisions on several huge capital projects, he's leaving and he'll never have to face the consequences of those decisions."

"If he had the courage of his convictions, he'd stay and see it through — unless he feels the provincial government is not that stable," Craik said.

Cass-Beggs was dismissed as head of Saskatchewan Power by Premier Ross Thatcher when the Liberals in 1964 ended 20 years of Saskatchewan government by the NDP's predecessor, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation.

Two officials who resigned from Manitoba Hydro in protest against Cass-Beggs' policies said the chairman's departure will open the opportunity to correct mistakes.

Douglas Campbell, a former Hydro board chairman, said the programs Cass-Beggs introduced are in seribus trouble. "Our gain is B.C.'s loss," he said.

Campbell and Kris Kristjanson, who resigned as assistant general manager of Hydro, particularly criticized the decision to delay diversion of the Churchill River through Southern Indian Lake, in favor of regulating Lake Winnipeg.

Kristjanson said that decision likely cost Manitoba about $200 million. The resignation "gives the government a rare opportunity of correcting these mistakes and it is to be hoped it will do so."

Cass-Beggs was named a consultant on Manitoba's northern power development in August, 1969, two months after the NDP came to office under Schreyer, and was named chairman of Manitoba Hydro in January, 1970.

Crash Injures Sidney Driver

A 20-year-old Sidney man is in "fairly good" condition today in Royal Jubilee Hospital following a one-car accident on Resthaven Drive near Macdonald Park Wednesday.

Steven Roy White, of 9555 Canora, suffered a fractured leg and internal injuries when his car hit a utility pole, Sidney RCMP said.

. . . WRONG ADVISERS

ministers in the process — want an immediate policy conference.

"Many, many young people in this country thought the promise of 1968 could have been fulfilled," said Harries. "I think it will be a tragedy if the needs and wishes of those young people are not considered."

As an example of Trudeau's lack of awareness of the West, Harries said, a letter he sent from Iran sat for nine months before it was answered.

"It was signed by Pierre Elliott Trudeau," said Harries, "but I don't believe the reasoning was his.

"I'm surprised he has waited so long with these bad advisers, because he's a very bright guy."

Harries said he is not "playing a cute little game." "The Liberal party constitution says that any convention automatically involves a call upon the leader to face the party members. I think that's right and fair in these circumstances.

"I am not calling for a resignation but I think the party deserves a full accounting."

Harries, who said Ivan Head had not spoken to him in the four years he served as MP for Edmonton Strathcona, was disappointed that strong Liberal candidates were caught in the anti-Trudeau feeling that spread through Alberta.

"I felt the people I was running with this time formed the strongest group I can remember. There was more pure talent in that group than in the others."

Harries said he hopes his bid for a policy conference will lead to "almost a social contract for action and . . . in specific terms."

Former dean of economics at University of Alberta, Harries said he had tried for four years to tell Trudeau his economic policies were wrong, particularly for the West.

The meeting Tuesday to call for a national policy convention was attended by defeated candidates Branny Schepanovich, Edmonton Centre; Mel Hurtig, Edmonton West; John Borger, Pembina; Allan Sulatycky, Rocky Mountain House; J. A. Barnhill, Wetaskiwin; James Ducharme, Athabasca; and a representative of Edmonton alderman Una Evans, defeated in Edmonton West.

Speaking in Ottawa, defeated Alberta cabinet minister Pat Mahoney described the outcome of Monday's voting in Alberta as "partly an anti-Trudeau vote and distinctly an anti-government vote."

"Certainly the prime minister and his personality is one factor."

. . . VIETNAM

to an end to the fighting in Vietnam.

In Paris, the Viet Cong renewed today an old Communist demand for the liquidation of all American military bases in South Vietnam.

There was no mention of United States bases in the summary of the proposed ceasefire agreement published by Hanoi two weeks ago, and it was assumed the Communists had dropped the demand in return for American abandonment of the demand for withdrawal of Hanoi's troops from South Vietnam.

Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong foreign minister, brought up the old demand at the 165th session of the Paris peace talks.

It seemed likely her return to this issue was a warning that a renewed demand for withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces could put into question the Communist concession permitting maintenance of the U.S. bases by South Vietnamese troops.

In Peking, Premier Chou En-lai said the United States must bear some of the responsibility for the passing of Tuesday's deadline for the signing of a Vietnam peace agreement.

In an apparent softening of the position staked out earlier in the Chinese press, the premier said that the U.S. was "to a certain extent" encouraging Thieu in his opposition to the agreement.

Last of the Generation of Giants

By JOHN M. SCOTT
Washington Post

Ezra Pound, who died Wednesday in Venice at the age of 87, was the last survivor of the generation of giants who invented modern literature in the early years of the century.

He was a friend of William Butler Yeats, T. S. Eliot and James Joyce, and the discoverer of writers as different at Robert Frost and Ernest Hemingway.

His own poetry, full of foreign phrases, mythological allusions and personal references, was condemned as esoteric and artificial, and praised as some of the greatest verse of the century. His literary influence, however, is indisputable.

Pound: A Question of Treason

Pound's career was clouded by charges that he was an anti-semite, a fascist and a traitor. Because of his radio broadcasts from Rome during the Second World War, he was indicted for treason. He was judged unable to stand trial by reason of insanity and confined for 12 years to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington before the indictment against him was dismissed.

Pound was born in Hailey, Idaho, on Oct. 30, 1885. When he was a child his family moved east to Wyncote, a suburb of Philadelphia, where Pound was raised. He enrolled in the University of Pennsylvania, and there met two other aspiring poets who became lifelong friends, William Carlos Williams and Hilda Doolittle (H.D.).

He transferred to Hamilton College in Clinton, N.Y., where he received his bachelor's degree in Romance literature, and returned to Pennsylvania for graduate study. After a trip to Europe while working on his Master's thesis, he started work as a teacher.

Pound's first job was at Wabash College in Crawfordsville, Ind. It did not last long. After four months he was fired for permitting a girl who performed with a traveling burlesque show to spend the night in his room. He headed for Europe, this time for Venice. "An excellent place to come to from Crawfordsville, Indiana," he wrote.

In Venice, Pound published his first book of poems, "A Lume Spento," and moved on to London.

There he barely supported himself by teaching medieval literature. One of his pupils was a young Englishwoman, Dorothy Shakespear, whom he married in 1914.

He began to make himself known in literary circles. He met Yeats and Ford Madox, and in 1909 published "Personae," the book of poetry that established his reputation.

All the time Pound was developing his ideas of poetry. He rejected the post-Victorian poetry of the day, calling it "A doughy mess of third-hand Keats, Wordsworth, heavens knows what . . ."

He became the leader of the Imagists, a group of poets who wrote free-verse poems of concentrated utterance. Typical of their work was Pound's famous poem "In a Station of the Metro:"

The apparition of these faces in a crowd:
Petals on a wet, black bough.

Pound felt that poetry should be precise, at least as well written as prose, and relevant to the 20th century.

One of the first to feel the impact of Pound's ideas was Yeats. Under their influence the Irish poet abandoned the Celtic romanticism of his early poems for the dry, conversational tone of the later poems that crowned his career.

In 1912, Harriet Monroe founded "Poetry: A Magazine of Verse," in Chicago, and Pound agreed to become its unsalaried foreign correspondent. He soon was supplying the magazine with his own poetry and that of his friends and "discoveries" — Yeats, Rabindranath Tagore, and an unknown American then living in London, Frost.

In September, 1914, Pound wrote Miss Monroe telling her he was sending "the best poem I have yet had or seen from an American." He had just met Eliot and read the manuscript of "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock."

A lifelong friendship developed between the two men. It produced its most important fruit in 1921 when Eliot presented Pound with a "Sprawling, chaotic" manuscript. Pound cut it in half and produced "The Waste Land." In appreciation, Eliot dedicated the poem to Pound.

Pound's association with Joyce began when he reprinted one of Joyce's poems in his anthology of Imogists.

Joyce, who was living in penury in Trieste, sent Pound the Manuscript of "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man." Pound had it printed serially and then in book form. He cajoled government agencies and private patrons into giving Joyce grants and later arranged the publication of Joyce's "Ulysses."

"It is probable," Joyce wrote in 1932, "that but for him I would still be the unknown drudge that he discovered."

In 1921 Pound moved from London to Paris. One day in the American Bookstore run by Sylvia Beach on Rue de L'Odeon, he was introduced to Hemingway, who pressed his manuscripts on Pound. Pound soon arranged the publication of Hemingway's first book, "In Our Time."

Pound lived in the centre of the Paris literary scene for five years, meeting Gertrude Stein and the composer George Antheil, editing little magazines, and working on the long poem that was to occupy him the rest of his life, "The Cantos."

This vast work, which mixes events in Pound's personal life with historical and mythological occurences, baffled many of his literary friends, including Yeats. It has defeated most readers. Yet there are passages in it of undeniable wit and beauty.

Pound moved from Paris to Rapallo, Italy, where he lived until his arrest at the end of the Second World War.

He always had criticized what he considered the vulgarity and tawdriness of modern life. In the 1930s, however, the tone of his criticism became increasingly strident. He renounced international bankers, particularly Jewish bankers, and espoused the economics of the Social Credit movement. He discovered Mussolini.

Economics became an obsession with him. He took to writing letters to European heads of state urging them to follow his monetary policies. "Usury is the cancer of the world," he declared, "which only the surgeon's knife of Fascism can cut out the life of nations."

In 1939 Pound visited the United States "in endeavor to stave off war," he declared. He was received in literary circles in New York and Boston and traveled to Washington to discuss his money theories with the government. President Roosevelt was too busy to see him, but he spoke to Sens. William E. Borah and William B. Bankhead, among others.

Hamilton College gave him an honorary degree, the first academic recognition he had ever received. Then he returned to Italy and the war broke out.

What happened next was described by Pound as follows:

"After continued opposition obtained permission to use Rome radio for personal propaganda in support of U.S. constitution, constitution, continuing after America's official entry into the war only on condition that he should never be asked to say anything contrary to his conscience or contrary to his duties as an American citizen. Which promise was faithfully observed by the Italian government."

Pound was arrested by Italian partisans in the spring of 1945 and was turned over to troops. He was taken to a military prison camp near Pisa and placed in solitary confinement in an open-air cage.

Searchlights shone on the cage all night, and Pound slept on the concrete floor. After three weeks he suffered a physical and mental breakdown and, transferred to the prison medical compound, where he lived in a tent.

Pound had written very little poetry during the war. Now he again started to write. He would work out his poem in his head during the day and write at night on a typewriter that the medics allowed him to use.

The result was the "Pisan Cantos," which many critics consider one of the strongest sections of that long, rambling work. Hemingway thought it was the best poetry Pound had ever written.

Pound was brought to the United States and arraigned in U.S. district court in Washington. His lawyer argued that Pound was not mentally able to plead to the charge, and a sanity examination was ordered.

Four psychiatrists — three for the government and one for the defense — agreed that Pound was suffering from paranoia. A jury ratified their findings, and Pound was confined to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

In 1948, the "Pisan Cantos" were published and received the Bollingen Prize for poetry. The award was made by the Fellows in American Letters of the Library of Congress.

The presentation caused a furor. The Saturday Review of Literature published violent attacks on Pound, the library fellows and even Paul Mellon, who provided the prize money. In the 1950s a growing number of people began to call for Pound's release from St. Elizabeth's. Frost carried the case to then Attorney General William P. Rogers (now secretary of state). Finally the government agreed to dismiss the treason charge on the ground that Pound would never be sane enough to stand trial.

He left the hospital in April, 1958. Two months later he sailed back to Italy.

Pound is survived by his wife and daughter and a son, Omar, an authority on Islamic literature.

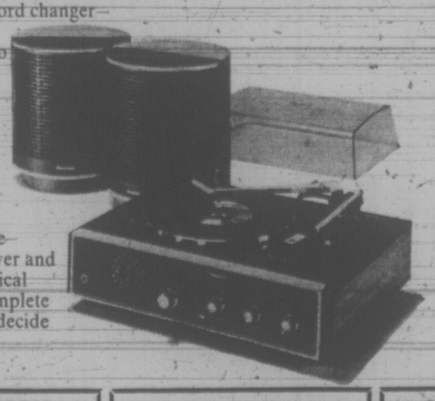
Panasonic offers you so many ways to go when you're building a sound system. You can choose from many combinations of radio, phono, cartridge and cassette...or you can mix and match individual Panasonic units to create a system that's all your own. .

A stage beyond stereo...The Glenview RS-281AS multiplies your pleasure still further. It offers the luxury of Quadruplex* circuitry to create 4-channel sound presence from conventional stereo sources, when you add an extra pair of speakers. The Glenview is an FM/AM/FM stereo receiver with a cassette recorder—and provision for adding other equipment. The recorder has twin VU meters and remote mike; it can record direct from the radio, through internal connections.

Panasonic Modular Stereo.
Our features multiply. Or you may add.

Here's an economically-priced stereo receiver versatile enough to grow into a high-quality stereo system. The Logansport RE-7412C plays FM/AM and FM stereo, superbly well. Circuitry includes refinements you'd expect to find on far more sophisticated equipment; FET tuner for accurate tuning, AFC on FM, ceramic filters and integrated circuits. Continuous tone control, channel balance control and the luxury of a loudness control help you produce the quality of sound you want. The Logansport has input jacks for phono and tape; outputs for tape recorder and stereo headphones. And it looks elegant, and expensive. Which it isn't.

You don't always have to add additional units yourself; simple multiplication by Panasonic can do the job for you. For example, The Chesterton SE-2010C. It's an FM/AM/FM stereo radio with a stereo record changer—but with input and output jacks for tape so that it can become a complete system. The receiver has ITL-OTL circuitry for improved transient and bass response. The changer is fully automatic, 3-speed; Magnistate cartridge with sapphire stylus. A plexiglass cover and two handsome cylindrical speaker enclosures complete the system—until you decide to add to it.



If you can't wait for tape, take a look at the next stage of multiplication—The Redmond SE-2080C, for example. The Redmond gives you the same superb FM/AM/FM stereo radio performance, the same fully automatic changer, plus a built-in 8-track cartridge player. It's a complete home entertainment system in handsome walnut wood and wood-grain cabinetry.

Our features multiply—you'll find all possible combinations of radio, phono, 8-track and cassette in our range, many with the luxury of Quadruplex* sound. Or you may link together individual Panasonic changers, tape decks, speakers, or headphones to make a truly individual system. Visit your Panasonic dealer, and find out how little it costs to start building a sound system that can grow with you.

Councils Need Wider Powers

A survey of the highrise projects of this city reads like a list of historic battles — Reid, Mace, Mulek, Wilson, and so on. Each has been sprung on us in the glow of the promoter's enthusiasm and hope, taken up by the city council in the desire for local development and visions of civic revenue, and begun on paper or on site with official hurrahs.

Then have come the second thoughts. The citizens have had time to realize what is going on and perhaps time to organize against it. The aldermen have heard the other side of the matter —which deals with congestion, appearance, costs and other pertinent items — and begun to wonder. And the battle is on.

It seems in many instances to be a one-sided battle. The city is actually very limited in its powers to control building which conforms to minimum legal requirements. Sometimes the full implications of the project are not recognized when a majority of council gives its assent. But far too often the community gets stuck with a construction which is disliked and unwanted by a large portion of the population.

The building may be badly placed. It may spoil the view both for nearby watchers and distant ones — and this is a community which depends heavily on its view for its popularity. It may be merely a sad-looking spectacle, unworthy of a place in the city. It may cause traffic problems, or sewage or water supply problems. It may be the cause of expensive street changes, or lasting congestion annoyances. It may just not harmonize with the environment as it is or as it should be.

Obviously, some of these are criteria which will vary in importance with the individual. Esthetic judgments are personal, although a large measure of agreement may be possible. But the fact is that in a time of rapid urban growth, of population explosion, of increasing problems and costs of living together, the community has very little to say regarding most of the building that goes on. And this is directly contrary to what should be the case.

Community growth should be in accordance with a plan. The plan should be the best one obtainable, and in harmony with the history, development and atmosphere of the community. Obviously bit-by-bit development will result in a bit-by-bit appearance of the city. An architectural hodge-podge can only lead ultimately to lower values, a poorer environment in which to live and work, and the high costs of bad layout and inefficient organization.

The current proposal for a design panel could be part of the answer. As a next step after the desired overall physical development of the city had been determined and the philosophical climate agreed on, some form of design panel could render excellent service in seeing that builders recognized certain requirements of appearance and use in their plans. It would be up to the city's elected government then to ensure that such requirements were met. Councils should have that power.

We have regulations regarding materials and workmanship, and laws on sanitation and fire hazards. Why should we not have strieter control of how a building will look and affect its environment?

There need be no rigid conformity, no dead hand of officialdom laid on architects. Creativity, innovation, freedom, ingenuity, would still be essential. But developers would recognize that they were not creating merely a building but a street, a neighborhood. Council would realize that it was not creating merely a neighborhood but a whole community. The community would achieve unity and coherence with all the advantages in efficiency that would follow. And, it may be hoped, some beauty.

Brighter Side in Taiwan

The conventional picture of Taiwan seen through Western eyes is radically changed in the light of its little-publicized "success story." To Westerners the island stronghold of aging Chiang Kai-shek seems to be a symbol of defeat — its once proud seat in the United Nations taken by Mainland China and its ruler's claim that the Nationalists will some day return to regain all China no more than a voice in the wind.

Yet The Christian Science Monitor reports that Taiwan has made significant strides forward and stands, in many respects, as a model for developing nations. Helped by early United States aid, it has an annual economic growth rate of 10 per cent and has reducd unemployment to 4 per cent. The income gap between the rich and the poor continues to shrink — the poorer one-fifth of the people having lifted their income by 200 per cent since 1950. Small farmers more than trebled their real income in the same time.

The literacy rate has been raised to 85 per cent, life expectancy has increased, infant mortality is lower and the birth rate has been held to a reasonable level.

These significant improvements are attributed to wise use of postwar American aid, extended mainly to the less prosperous people and channelled into labor-intensive projects.

In the realm of international politics Taiwan languishes. But while the spotlight has been focused on that aspect, the less spectacular economic and social development of the country has gone quietly ahead, achieving greatly improved living conditions for the people.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

For the Vets

I read with dismay and disgust the opinions of certain people on the subject of Veterans' Service Hospitals.

I am a veteran's wife and a member of the Ladies' Auxiliary (Legion). I have seen the care and kindness these men get in these hospitals.

Don't they all deserve this after giving their best to keep the country and these people free of all the unpleasant affairs of the world, or is it that these same opinionated people have very short memories? I wonder—do they ever buy a poppy?

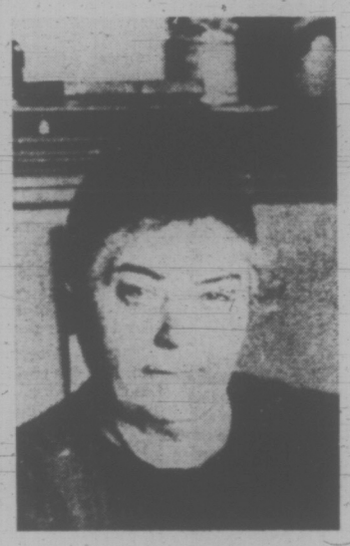
Play of All-Sorts

Anyone watching the CBC TV on Wednesday, October 25, expecting to see an entertaining musical version of the life of Emily Carr, was in for a great disappointment. What could have been a great opportunity to show Canadians an entertaining musical, similar to the delightful "Anne of Green Gables," resulted in a glaringly poorly researched and distasteful viewing experience, combined with sloppy production and directing.

The embarrassing scenes of distortion regarding the B.C. Indian was an insult, specifically a scene showing a former Indian nurse, friend of the younger Emily, as an obvious prostitute, on the arms of two sailors, an incident not to be found in her writings, but obviously showing a contrived prejudice towards the Indian culture. Not all was entirely bad; some songs and a young Emily and elder sisters singing showed what might have been. The Indian dancing scene was a travesty. Letters of protest should be sent to Mr. Chretien, minister of the Department of Indian Affairs and to Mr. Picard, president of the CBC.



EMILY CARR

This latest attempt of the CBC has only further confirmed a growing suspician that amateurs are being hired and that the experts have all gone, to the CBC's complete deterioration. — Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bowie.

New Canadians

Please advise whether or not a committee has been formed to welcome our new Canadians from Uganda.

I would be happy to call on them with home baking and take them for drives in my car. Have our businessmen joined together to try and help them find jobs?

I, for one, would like to help these courageous people to think and feel Canadian. We have the best country in the world. Let's not be afraid to share it.—(Mrs.) B. Funke, 685 Niagara St.

Parklands

With reference to the leading article in the Times Oct. 25, I am impelled to express my thanks for this excellent editorial, and your continued support of the problem at Thetis Lake. I believe, with you, that this watershed-holding of the City should come under community management; apparently the peripheral drainage so necessary to protection of the "Park" values will not be acquired until the Thetis area becomes a Regional park. Unfortunately, the City holds the key to this situation, and we, the public, seem to be unable to change the lock. —Eric Garman, 936 Heywood Ave.

MAURICE WESTERN

Into Deeper National Waters

OTTAWA — The dimensions of the crisis facing Canada have become more clear with the passing hours to thoughtful members of both major political parties. As a result the normal emotions of an election aftermath: elation, relief, disappointment — have already become muted as Liberals and Conservatives alike ponder the very hard questions imposed by the returns.

A pressing question, although not the most fundamental, is the future of the Trudeau Government. There are two possible courses. The prime minister may resign, as many Liberals, publicly or privately, are urging him to do. Or he may face Parliament and seek a vote of confidence; a right not disputed by Robert Stanfield.

Some post-election commentators, whether intentionally or through imprecision, have suggested a third possibility: namely that Mr. Trudeau should seek a second dissolution, thus enabling the country at the earliest date to resolve the political crises. But this course is not open to him unless and until he has obtained a confidence vote.

No King-Byng Precedent

The King-Byng controversy has no bearing on the point for in fact, whatever Mr. King's wandering thoughts, his government had lived with Parliament for some months before it was brought down. No government, repudiated at the polls, can bypass Parliament to claim a second chance.

One hears many arguments for immediate resignation. Some Liberals cite the example of Mr. St. Laurent in rather similar circumstances. In their view, the party will only lose respect if it appears to be clinging to power and emoluments.

Others cite the many practical difficulties which would plague a defeated and demoralized, continuing government. Not all of these may be generally appreciated. Some might well arise from the situation in the public service which, for the first time in modern history, has turned markedly distrustful of a Liberal government.

Linked with the argument about the government's future is an already partially public discussion of Mr. Trudeau's future role in the Liberal party. There is some irony in this development because it was widely supposed that the election would cast doubt on Robert Stanfield's leadership. But the situation is not like that which has often followed Conservative defeats. The deeper Liberal doubts arise from the conviction that Mr. Trudeau, for a variety of reasons, has antagonized much of English Canada and would thus be seriously handicapped in rebuilding a united party to bridge the gap between the two sections.

What oppresses everyone is the perception that the country has been split once again with the raw edge of sectional conflict dividing one electorate from the other. No one is more conscious of this than Mr. Stanfield, who appeared troubled and even grim as he considered at a press conference Tuesday evening the Quebec problem looming before him. His goodwill towards French Canada is beyond question, but Quebec has denied him so much as a corporal's guard of supporters.

ROBERT STANFIELD

Will a second election change this? It is arguable that Mr. Stanfield was not rejected as Meighen was; he was simply ignored. For Quebecers in most constituencies, the realities were the governing Liberals and Real Caouette. The returns suggest that Stanfield candidates were merely brushed aside by voters as third party interlopers. There is no particular evidence of active dislike of Mr. Stanfield but there may well be in Quebec a very deep-seated distrust of the Conservative party.

The danger now is plainly evident. Beyond the Ottawa River the election is being widely interpreted as an English Canadian blow to "French power," a phrase which means one thing to a majority of Quebecers and another to people in the other provinces. For Liberal politicians this is an easy excuse; it is not necessary to admit mistakes if voters were guided by racial prejudice. But one reaction provokes another; the clear risk now is that attitudes will harden, decreasing the possibility that another election will break up monoliths on either side.

Mr. Stanfield's hope must be that, like John Diefenbaker but unlike Arthur Meighen, he can make a second and successful appeal to Quebec. For this the minds of voters in both parts of the country must be turned away from sectional confrontation.

Gravely Complicating

There is a gravely complicating factor which was not present on the previous occasion: an active and well-organized separatist party which has already taken up the rejection theme and will doubtless continue to gibe at the Liberals for alleged failure in their role as custodians of French power.

Some of the questions now being asked are fundamental. Although government is required to deal with ever more complex problems, it has become in the last two decades increasingly difficult to find majority governments with the power and will to meet them. The fifth minority government since 1957 is now required to repair the most dangerous sectional breach since the last war. Questions are beginning to emerge about the relevaney of present party alignments in situations of such potential danger to the country.

As yet there is not very much of this. If party philosophies have become blurred, party loyalties remain strong. But it may be of some significance that such deeply probing questions are being asked by some of the most serious and highminded men in Ottawa.

We are only at the beginning of crises; as of Wednesday evening, after one cabinet meeting, we do not even know which of the leaders, Pierre Trudeau or Robert Stanfield, will preside over a caretaker government for the next few months. But either, as prime minister, will be in for a rough passage and it is possible that a good deal of hitherto accepted wisdom will be swept away by the winter winds.

Bilingualism: Reverse Effect

Bilingualism remains very much an issue with a great many Canadians because of the patronizing and authoritarian manner in which it was conceived and imposed upon the country. The idea behind bilingualism may have been a noble one. To reduce injustices and further the cause of Canadian unity is indeed a commendable aim.

However, noble does not always equate with right, and, in fact, the bilingual program has been a failure throughout its conception, inception, and implementation. Rather than meet its aims it has created further injustices and has widened the gap of mistrust and misunderstanding between French and English Canadians.

The bilingual program erred in conception because of an incorrect and incomplete diagnosis of the ailment. The diagnosis is indeed a difficult one, fraught with multiple symptoms and many misleading complications. Exploitation of Quebec by English businessmen, and by the province's own politicians, are but a couple of factors. A major factor is the often misinterpreted discontent of the poor and unemployed. But does a tourniquet applied to the leg, with any degree of good intention, aid a victim with a severed artery in the arm?

By the same token neither will the fact that everyone in Halifax, Toronto, and Victoria is able to speak French alleviate the cause of French discontent. The proof of this is that, ironically, there is greater indifference to the bilingual program in Quebec than in English-speaking Canada.

Every Canadian is touched by this program. One would have to be a hermit not to sense the developing backlash of resentment and outrage across English-speaking Canada. This is doubly a shame, for not only is the rift widening between English and French, but, also, areas of genuine concern are clouded in ever increasing mistrust.

All Canadians are affected by bilingualism, but it is the federal civil service and the Canadian Armed Forces that feel its implications as directly and keenly as any. This is unfortunate, for these two services could and should be a fertile ground for the furthering of greater tolerance and understanding between French and English Canadians. The government was obviously aware of this when it introduced its bilingual policies. However, the nature of these policies as they relate to the services has generally had the opposite effect.

Armed Forces recruits speaking only French receive English language instruction early in their basic training. The converse is not necessarily true. There are now facilities available for English-speaking servicemen to receive French instruction; however, the number of personnel able to avail themselves of this training is limited by course loading and availability of personnel. Often, through no omission of their own, English-speaking servicemen, particularly at the officer level, are then penalized by promotion boards which are required to give substantial weight to linguistic ability, i.e. bilingualism.

Thus an officer, judged outstanding in all other areas of assessment but lacking a bilingual capability, may be displaced on the promotion list by one who was rated lower on his performance but is bilingual. This leads to a considerable amount of resentment, by officers of both English and French extraction. The English because the weight accredited to bilingualism in light of their opportunity to become bilingual is unjust. — the French because when they are promoted it may be considered by their contemporaries to be on the basis of linguistic ability rather than merit.

An even more disturbing aspect of the government's bilingual policy with respect to the Armed Forces is the stated requirement that each rank will consist of 28 per cent Francophones. At present the across-service level is about 10 per cent. As long as we operate a voluntary force it is difficult to foresee how this percentage will change significantly, short of firing 55,000 Anglophones.

I am well aware that the government hopes that its bilingual policies will make the service appear more attractive to French Canadians. I strongly question the implication that these dubious policies will attract three times the number of Francophones. Meanwhile, the immediate result is a strong pressure to increase the number of Francophones at senior levels through promotion. It is not difficult to imagine the potentially disastrous results on morale of a real or imagined promotion policy based on ethnic background.

The financial implications of the bilingual program were well documented by Maurice Western on page four of the October 25 "Times." As Mr. Western observes, the cost is high, some $54 million. I would submit that the actual cost is much higher when the full implications of the program are considered. In any event a lot of money is being spent on bilingualism; money that could be spent on easing unemployment, on education, on social assistance programs, and on easing the severely restricted defence budget.

Few Canadians would begrudge money spent on a valid program to banish injustices and alleviate English-French tensions. They have a right and a duty to object when the expenditure of these public monies is creating the opposite effect.

The entire concept of French-English co-existence within Confederation is an extremely demanding and sensitive problem requiring the mobilization of our best human resources. It will not be solved by piece-meal attempts. It will only be harmed by irresponsible attitudes and statements. — In Uniform.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of November 2, 1912:

Bound from Oriental ports for Victoria the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Awa Maru, Capt. Irishawa, was picked up by wireless last night 1,300 miles from Estevan. She was spoken at midnight, and although the agents do not expect her in before Thursday morning, it is just possible she may reach William Head before sundown on Wednesday. The weather, however, is so unsettled on the Pacific at present that it is impossible yet to figure what time the Awa will reach Victoria.

What We Need Is More Wars That Nobody Wins

By RICHARD ARMOUR

(Armour is the well-known satirist and author of "It All Started with Stones and Clubs.")

The trouble with most wars, throughout history, is that they have been won. In fact, they have often been won conclusively or decisively, which is even worse.

The wars waged by the Egyptians, Assyrians, Persians, Macedonians, Carthaginians, Romans, Swedes, Italians, French and Germans — from Alexander to Charlegmagne and from Frederick the Great to Napoleon — were invariably won, at least by the winner. They were also lost by the loser, but that is of less importance to the theory that I am about to advance.

What I maintain is that too many wars have been won, and that these wars, having been successful, have led to other wars. To win a war, I should explain, means to overthrow a government, gain territory (or re-draw boundaries), collect reparations, humiliate a people, impose an alien ideology. To achieve any one of these objectives is to win. To achieve all of them is to win overwhelmingly.

Examples of good, clear-cut victories were the sacking of Rome by Alaric and his Visigoths, the Norman conquest of England, the French subjugation of just about all their neighbors under Louis XIV (at least during the early part of his regime), and the defeat of the French by the Prussians in the Franco-Prussian War.

The Franco-Prussian War is a classic example of the way wars should not be fought if we are ever to bring an end to war. After only six months of warfare, the Prussians overcame the French, took over the 4,700 square miles of Alsace and Lorriane, and received an indemnity of $1 billion for their time and effort.

Naturally enough, the victors could hardly wait to try their military skill on someone else, hoping for equal or even greater profit and honor.

By contrast, during all of recorded history there have been only a few truely inconclusive wars — wars without an unquestioned delineation of victor and vanquished. Two such wars, ending without that old sense of satisfaction and job well done, were the Crusades and the Hundred Years' War.

The Crusades, with much starting and stopping, went on for about 200 years and accomplished nothing save some extensive travels by the Crusaders, most of whom did not live to return and tell where they had been and what they had seen. The Hundred Years' War, which actually lasted for 116 years, had something or other to do with who was to be king of something, but actually achieved little more than the development of the longbow, which was considered the ultimate weapon.

Conclusive wars have vastly outnumbered inconclusive wars from earliest times up through World War I and World War II. But with the Korean War, the Vietnam War, and most recently the conflict in Northern Ireland and the stalemate in the Middle East, there is some indication that a trend may have set in, and the inconclusive war may be the war of the future.

This is heartening. It gives us cause for hope. Had there been more wars like the Crusades and fewer wars like the Franco-Prussian War, the lesson of war's futility might have been learned long before this. But so long as wars were clearly won, with all those moral and material gains accuring to the victor, there was sure to be some nation, some leader, ready to make a new try for gold and for glory.

What I am suggesting is that if we can have a few hundred years of inconclusive wars (it takes time for this sort of thing to sink in), it may ultimately come to be understood that war either (1) accomplishes nothing or (2) is an expensive way of accomplishing something, perhaps something that should not be accomplished anyhow.

However, as long as virtually every war is won, there will be more wars. What keeps a gambling casino going? The fact that some customers win, and win big. How long would the place be in business if no one ever won? Or think of horse racing — a race track where every race ending in a tie by all horses running.

We have had too many winners: Hannibal, Caesar, Charlemagne, William the Conqueror, Genghis Khan, Gustavus Adolphus, Frederick the Great, to mention only a few. We have also had too many losers — smarting under defeat, waiting to get back at those who defeated them and took their lands away from them.

What we have not had enough of, to pass along to others their sense of futility and frustration, are those who have neither won nor lost, and thereby have learned that they were engaged in a stupid waste of time and effort and property and lives.

It would be good if, without even one more lesson, we could come to understand the futility of war. But that is asking too much. We shall have to settle for what I see as a new and hopeful development. I envisage a series of wars in which no nation, no leader, is called the victor, and neither side is said to have won or, for that matter, to have lost. Never will there be any sort of commemorative monument.

The Hundred Years' War might be taken as a model. One thing I have always liked about that war was the recesses between periods of fierce fighting. During some such recess, or time for thinking, in one of the inconclusive wars of the future, someone may ask, "No one seems to win anymore. Why do we keep this up?"

Ballard: Is Jail Needed?

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

BALLARD
. . . publicity hurts

The question before the class today is crime and punishment, how many fights it takes to neutralize a wrong, and specifically the case of Harold Ballard and his three-year penitentiary sentence for fraud and theft.

Every person who spoke as a character witness on his behalf before the sentencing is a friend or acquaintance of mine and they said nothing with which I disagree. I volunteered to be a character witness but there were actually so many that if we'd all turned up it would have been like a mob scene from Solzhenitsyn's new novel. It is not that Ballard is perfect, but he turns out to have a hell of a lot more friends than people who are, which should tell you something about the human race; friends in this case being people who are with you, thick or thin.

I just don't think society is served by having Harold Ballard stay in jail, and earnestly petition the National Parole Board to release him. He has already been all the deterrent he's going to be (as that seems to be an issue). If other company presidents, regarding with horror this example of the law's righteous wrath, are going to snatch their hands out of the till and become church deacons (if they are not already), they'll do so whether Ballard serves three days or three years. Ballard's case should be treated entirely on its own. He long ago went through the worst punishment: the original disclosures. His partner, the late Stafford Smythe, once told me, "Nothing that comes after could be as bad as the first shock, the publicity and then facing the family."

Look, they let men out of prison too soon after they have committed real crimes — crimes of violence, which involve one human hurting, maiming, violating, killing another. There is no similarity whatever (except under the law) between such offences and the Ballard case. If he were released at noon today and allowed to resume his business, social and humanitarian activities, the country would be better for it.

Who was ever hurt by Harold Ballard? (Except maybe Harold Ballard). The shareholders of Maple Leaf Gardens? I can think of at least a dozen big, plausible company presidents who could have run Maple Leaf Gardens in such a way in the last few years that it would not have made half the profit that Ballard generated. Maybe none at all. If it was indeed true that Ballard, like the Lord, both gaveth and tooketh away, it is my contention that he gaveth more than he tooketh. By a long shot. Both to Gardens' shareholders and others, great and small.

I suppose someone might conclude from the foregoing that I condone certain acts that the Criminal Code defines as crimes. Right. The field of non-violent crime is so large that one way or another, it includes all humanity. They can't put us all in jail.

The last time I talked to Harold was the day the Soviet hockey team played in Maple Leaf Gardens. We had a couple of coffees together that morning. He told me in the most natural manner, "Scott, I don't want to do any time in the can. But whether I do or not, I still don't feel I ever stole a nickel from anybody."

Maybe he's wrong there; but on the other hand, right or wrong he is sure of one thing — he has permanently retired from all activities that might get the law on his tail again.

In that sense, he is ahead of the rest of us. If we cheat a little here and there, we're still doing it.

MR. SAUNDERS AND 'THE LIST'

CENTRAL OKANAGAN CAPITAL NEWS
An Editorial

The revelation that a Kelowna man, an inveterate writer of letters to the editor, was summoned to the police station for questioning as a potential threat to the safety of Prime Minister Trudeau during his visit here, has caused considerable stir.

We have been acquainted with the gentleman, Leonard R. Saunders, for some months now and greatly admire his ability to express his opinions. Often, we don't disagree with the point of his argument, but merely his arguments. His views are at the far right and we're separated by several notches indeed.

But Mr. Saunders is one of those rare blokes who has the courage to state his opinion and any threat to his right to express those opinions, within legal limitations, is a threat against the freedom of expression which belongs to all of us.

This newspaper has been pleased to publish Mr. Saunders' letters, both during election campaigns and at other times, because we view the free expression of political opinions as fundamental to the democratic system. And we do not believe in being selective when it comes to allowing people to exercise their right of free speech.

We feel Mr. Saunders contrubutes considerably to the public discussion of vital issues through his letters to the editor. He stimulates such discussion because he has never been guilty of boring his readers, while some editorial writers bore their readers some of the time and most of them bore their readers most of the time.

As we have stated, we do not agree with many of the views expressed by Mr. Saunders. In fact, we often think that the frequent extremism of his arguments benefits rather than harms the object of his derision. But it will be a sad day in this country when he isn't free to express those views, regardless of how repugnant they may be to the majority.

The manner in which Mr. Saunders was called to the police station would be enough to worry any citizen with a clear conscience. But we must concede that the police have a job to do in checking out individuals who might be capable of harming persons in high places and we haven't the experience in such matters to say how best to go about it.

What does concern us, however, is who decides who is to be checked out? Is there a list somewhere? Is anyone who has written letters to the editor — or editorials for that matter — which are derogatory of persons in high places subject to police interrogation concerning their intentions? Is anyone whose political views are considerably left or right of centre to be intimidated against speaking his mind?

This matter of Mr. Saunders being questioned by the police about his attitude toward Mr. Trudeau has really served Mr. Saunders' cause far more effectively than even his rapier wit. For it is bound to make people wonder about the answers to these questions and more and, let's admit it, the incident has been the most interesting thing to happen around here since the federal election was called.

After our edition which disclosed Mr. Saunders' call to the police station and carried his letter describing the incident, somebody said that maybe it would serve to still his pen for the balance of the election. The person said he was tired of reading letters from Mr. Saunders and other persons who regularly take advantage of our open letters-to-the-editor policy.

We concede it would be better to publish letters from a wider segment of the community than we have been during this election campaign. But the fault lies not with the newspaper, Mr. Saunders nor the others who have the will to declare their ideas but with the great unwashed ones who, if they have any original thoughts at all, are too lazy or indifferent to express them.

The likes of Mr. Saunders do more for the preservation of free speech than a thousand Silent Sams who cringe at the thought of advancing a considered opinion.

Some fresh air is needed around here. Honestly, now, who put Mr. Saunders on The List and why?

BY BRITISH HOUSE

TV Coverage Vetoed

By COLIN McCULLOUGH

LONDON — The House of Commons rejected a motion to televise parliamentary proceedings but the debate the other night did produce some guidelines to be considered if the cameras are to move into the Canadian House of Commons some day.

The debate produced some voluble if not very illuminating examples of arguments that will be raised by opponents.

"This would be an experiment which would rank with a young man taking a girl to Brighton for the weekend, and the results could be nearly as unpredictable," said Conservative Norman Tebbit.

"What has happened to religion since television has had a hold on it? It has degenerated into Stars On Sunday with Shirley Bassey singing Ave Maria and Tom Jones singing Land of Hope and Glory," said Labor member Joseph Ashton.

"Too much attention will be paid to the oddities, the pranks and the comedians. This will change from being a debating chamber and become a stage for performers," said Labor member Sir Myer Galpern.

But these digressions aside, there was some explanation of the mechanics of installing television in the Commons. This came from House Leader Robert Carr, who strongly supported the free vote motion.

He said he had talks with public and private networks and that his main concern was that the "proceedings should be as open to the cameras as to the eye of someone sitting in the galleries, neither more nor less."

Here are other points he made:

The experiment should be public, rather than on closed circuit, in order to judge its worth. The experiment could last three weeks, and would be limited to the chamber and not include committees. Committees could be televised if the experiment proved successful.

The broadcasting authorities could justifiably be asked for written undertakings to treat proceedings with accuracy and impartiality.

General guidance could be offered to the networks but they would be unwilling to accept detailed rules concerning coverage.

The telecasts would be in color, but the problem of heat and glare could be partly overcome by indirect lighting. Five cameras would be installed, three at a low level.

Cost of the experiment would be borne by the networks, except for about $5,000 for temporary adaption of the chamber.

Mr. Carr, speaking in favor of the motion, added that he did not think the House so "weak-willed" to allow an experiment to become permanent if television were found to be unsatisfactory.

Nonetheless the parliamentarians disagreed, 101 to 165, in what one London columnist described as a splendid blow for reaction.

A Writer's Notebook

By RICHARD NEEDHAM
The Globe and Mail

All federal elections in Canada come out the same way — a sweeping victory for Mackenzie King.

Oscar Wilde: "The only thing to do with good advice is to pass it on. It is never of any use to oneself."

Middle-aged women get the same punishment in Hell as they had on earth — having to consort with other middle-aged women.

I'm pleased to learn that the distinguished English poet, W. H. Auden, loves to drink, smokes 50 cigarettes a day, and is 65 years old. Now, doesn't that please you, too?

Thoreau: "We often forbear to confess our feelings, not from pride, but for fear that we could not continue to love the one who required us to give such proof of our affection."

People in the hotel and restaurant business tell me there are only two ways they can get help — (1) by hiring people away from other hotels and restaurants and (2) by grabbing immigrants as they get off the ship or plane.

For some years now, I've been giving money to people whom I know (or think I know) pretty well, and who seem likely to make good use of it. From this, I've learned an interesting lesson — that the ones who make the best use of the money are those who don't specially need it. A very wicked moral could be drawn from this — that the rich, instead of helping the poor, should help the rich, or, at any rate should help the middle class.

Most women have had one or two affairs. M. has had dozens, that's her way of life, and in the course of them has found out that most men are deeply unhappy — "They're trapped in some awful job or marriage, or both; and the more imposing their job or their money, the more miserable they are. The only happy men I ever knew were the cowboys back in the west, they had no wives, no children, no money, but my God, Richard, they were alive."

It's a good idea to have a movie like Deliverance restricted. If a girl of 15 got in to see it, she might find out things she knew when she was 12.

A great advantage of highway buses is that they take you to the heart of downtown. (Kingston is the only exception I can think of.) Trains, too, used to have this advantage, but I notice a tendency to put the stations away out of town. This gives highway buses an additional edge; not only are they cheaper to ride on than trains and planes, but you don't have additional costs (taxis, airport buses) when you depart and arrive.

Albert Jay Nock: "How interesting it is, that in this most pretentious and swaggering country, a man can get himself elected to any kind of office on the strength of any kind of promises, then disregard them at his utter pleasure, with no action taken or even any notice taken."

Toronto's the hardworking husband, Ottawa's the extravagant wife, and she takes him for all he's got. She blows the money on junk, nags him for more, and proceeds to spend it on more junk.

Butler: "There are more fools than knaves in the world, else the knaves would not have enough to live upon."

There's only one human right worth a damn. That's the right to walk along the street by day or by night, without the apprehension of being mugged or murdered. When this right goes down the drain (as is happening in places like New York, Detroit, Chicago, Montreal), all the other rights, real or imagined, go down it, too. This is one of the many reasons I don't vote in elections. I refuse to support any party or person that puts welfare, prosperity, progress or even justice ahead of order.

A political party could easily promise to give everybody — man, woman or child — $10,000 a year; and could easily get elected on that promise; and, once elected, could easily keep that promise. Such are the wonders of inflation and such is gullibility of the electorate.

City Investment Houses Ready For First 'Tax Loss Season'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria's investment houses are preparing for their first season of tax loss selling — but they expect first-year action may be quiet and cautious.

The new capital gains tax is anything but simple and stock profits have to be considered along with any sales of bonds, land, jewelry; anything of value.

The complexity of the new laws means that most investment houses are advising their clients to check with their tax accountants rather than seeking advice on tax matters from brokers.

OFFER INFORMATION

In short they are not setting themselves up as tax experts although they offer information services and will assist with trades once a tax plan has been formulated by the client.

The tax accountant has the advantage of knowing the client's complete financial picture in regards to land and other holdings while the registered representative of an investment house only has information on his stock sales.

In connection with stock trading, most brokers are advising clients to remember the total investment picture of a stock, not merely the tax factors.

"If an investor shouldn't sell for investment reasons, he shouldn't sell for tax reasons," says Harvey Bailey, manager of the Victoria branch of Doherty Roadhouse and McCuaig.

"We are being very careful about tax advice. We are not as sophisticated as the Americans in handling stock losses — they have been doing it for years," he said.

TAKES TIME

"I would not expect there will be too much in the way of trading this year for tax purposes. It takes time for investors to learn the advantages of tax selling and everyone will be moving cautiously."

At one time December was the big month for tax stock selling in New York but in recent years it has moved back to November and some of the October volume can be traced to tax moves as well.

Prices often rise in January with heavy buying pressure — as investors try to recover the stock sold in November — but in some years an otherwise declining market has kept the January prices in check.

So, playing against the tax sellers can be a risky game. Prices are often low at year's end but there is often little in the way of an increase in January, a fact which can put margin players in difficulties.

CLAIM HALF OF LOSSES

According to the new tax rules, an investor can claim half his stock losses aginst regular income for tax purposes.

On the other hand he is responsible for half his capital gains, which will be taxed as regular income.

Last day of trading for tax purposes will be Dec. 29, a Friday.

Losses may be claimed up to any amount to overset capital gains but at the end of the calculation the total loss (if there is one) claimed for a deduction against regular income can only total $1,000 or less in any tax year.

For example, an investor with capital gains in stocks of $4,000 and capital losses of $5,000 would pay no capital gains tax. In fact he could claim a $500 deduction against his regular income (half of his $1,000 net loss).

Another investor with a $5,000 stock loss and no stock gains could write off the maximum — $1,000 — against his regular income.

The federal finance department says it selected Dec. 22, 1971 as valuation day because the market generally reached a high point at that time.

The Toronto Stock Exchange index of industrial share prices reached 184.12 points, the highest in eight months. Then it slackened to 181.64 at the close of trading New Year's Eve.

The Dec. 31 date was selected for valuation of other assets except for stocks because the year end was the most convenient time for stock-taking, the finance department said.

Bush Pilot with a Briefcase
The happy-go-lucky story of Grant McConachie by Ronald Keith

At 22 he was flying Indians, trappers and quarrelsome huskies into the north from Edmonton. At 38 he was president of Canadian Pacific Airlines and applying the bush pilot's adventuresome spirit to widening the airline's horizons on a global scale. Ronald Keith brings out the best of McConachie's fascinating exploits in this rags-to-riches success story. 32 pages of outstanding photos. $7.95

EXPLOSIVES PLANT SET FOR ASHCROFT

A $4 million commercial explosives plant will be built near Ashcroft, a joint announcement by Alex Macdonald, minister of industrial development, trade and commerce, and Du Pont of Canada Ltd., said today.

Capacity of the plant, to open late in 1973, was not disclosed.

Output will be largely newly-developed products, including small-diameter water gel explosives, regarded as safer than traditional nitroglycerin-based types, said a company news release.

Water gels are expected to be adopted for virtually all applications in which dynamite is now used.

The 700-acre site, on the south bank of the Thompson River about two miles from Ashcroft, and 200 miles northeast of Vancouver, was selected "because of its location on excellent transportation facilities in the heart of B.C. mining industry," the company said.

Confusion Seen As Vote Result

TORONTO (CP) — Economists and market analysts appear to agree that Canada is in for a period of confusion and indecision as a result of the indecisive federal election.

Among the problems they see is an interruption in long-range economic planning and perhaps a delay in some major projects such as the $6 billion Mackenzie Valley pipeline.

They talk, too, of a possible lower value for the Canadian dollar, the fear of a renewed bout of inflation and new consideration of price and wage controls.

Among other items, these also are mentioned: energy resources development, trade negotiations with the United States, federal-provincial relations and foreign investment.

Some economists, however, feel that whichever of the major parties forms a government, there will be some support from the other for measures to stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment.

ECONOMISTS DISAGREE

As Seymour Friedland, professor of economics at York University, put it, the voters didn't "challenge" the existing political system in any significant way. They gave the NDP more seats, but the major shift was from Liberals to Conservatives.

W. Allan Beckett, a consulting economist, has a dissenting view. He feels the election results may "paralyse" the government's ability to make major changes in taxation and spending policies.

John Cripso, dean of the faculty of management studies at University of Toronto, is pessimistic.

"What worries me is that we're faced with a period of indecision in which we're unlikely to get sensible policies to deal with the twin problems of unemployment and inflation."

And this, he says, "is no time to be indecisive."

DOLLAR MAY WEAKEN

A money market dealer feels the Canadian dollar may weaken. This would be good for exports "but it won't look so good six months from now if we have a run against the dollar."

Mr. Beckett sees a good deal of "shadow boxing" on issues with long-term implications such as economic relations with the U.S. He expects no real action until after another election.

Both Prof. Friedland and David McQueen, chairman of the economics department at Glendon College, see the government adopting an expansionary stance to try to create more jobs.

As a result, both see dangers of inflation.

The answer to that, says Prof. Friedland, will be price and wage controls.

"Not necessarily," says Mr. McQueen. "There's a very attractive possibility that ought to be checked out, which is to stimulate economic activity by reducing indirect taxes, particularly sales taxes."

Mr. Beckett agrees inflation "is a problem and will remain a problem."

Quebec May Force 'Buy Quebec' Plan

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government may take steps to impell large commercial food chains to buy a larger percentage of their products in Quebec, Guy Saint-Pierre, minister of industry and commerce, said Wednesday.

Saint-Pierre said large retail distributors are buying their products in Ontario because of lower prices. He told a symposium of Quebec food and agriculture industry representatives they must undertake to regain control of the province's $3 billion food production and distribution sector.

He said scarcely 30 per cent of the Quebec food industry is controlled by local interests.

A "buy Quebec" policy may become necessary if Quebec's share of the total of agricultural products produced in Canada continues to drop, he said.

Police Seeking Hit, Run Clues

Victoria police investigating five hit-and-run accidents which occurred last month are stuck for clues.

Constable Fred Beard, of the traffic division, has requested assistance from persons who may have witnessed any of them.

On Oct. 8, at 4:50 a.m., a white 1968 Ford two-door was involved in a minor collision with two other vehicles in a parking lot at the east end of the 700-block Field Street.

Between Oct. 7 and 8 a red 1970 Toyota was struck on the right side while parked at Vic's Auto Repair, 2333-A Government.

The offending vehicle is probably pale blue.

On Oct. 22, between 4:30 p.m. and 5:30 p.m., a 1965 Valiant was parked on the east side of Quadra, north of Yates, when struck on the right side by a vehicle using the Uniroyal Service lot.

The driver of the other vehicle was probably at a local bowling alley and may not be aware of the damage.

★ ★ ★

Between 6:30 p.m., Oct. 20 and 1:30 a.m., Oct. 21 a brown 1961 Peugeot sedan was parked on the west side of Ormond, north of Fort Street, when struck on the left side by a blue vehicle.

On Oct. 26 a white 1963 Buick two-door, licence number GGK-473, was stolen sometime after 10 p.m. from the parking lot of the Colony Motor Inn, 2852 Douglas.

At 11:30 p.m. it smashed into a fire hydrant at Chambers and Grant, causing about $300 damage to the car. The hydrant was demolished and several residences flooded.

★ ★ ★

"The incidence of minor accidents on parking lots is increasing and any citizen seeing an occurrence of this nature is requested to make a note of the licence numbers of both vehicles. Information is treated with confidence," said Beard.

Forestry Forecast

Future of the forest industry will be discussed in a speech to Victoria Chamber of Commerce Nov. 15 at the Empress Hotel by W. G. Burch, general manager of Timberlands, B.C. Forest Products Ltd.

He will discuss depletion, pollution, labor problems and renewing forest resources.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A man whose heroin addiction motivated him to commit his first crimes was fined a total of $600 and placed on two years' probation by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Wednesday.

Larry Douglas Hurdle pleaded guilty Oct. 16 to breaking into three Saanich homes between Sept. 26 and Oct. 14 and stealing a total of $431 in cash and other items.

He also pleaded guilty to attempting to break and enter another Saanich home between Sept. 29 and Oct. 12.

Defence counsel Brian Roberts told the court "that these offences were all caused by this whole drug scene."

"This whole situation is like a black cancer on the body of our society," he said.

"The fact is, that these are extremely serious charges," said Prosecutor John Macintyre.

Ostler said there were certain "sociological" aspects that entered into the case.

"It's done because the group does it," he said.

Heroin or drug addictions cause many young people to resort to crime and "the public are the sufferers," said Ostler.

★ ★ ★

Dave Wallace Cameron, 20, of 2796 Cadboro Bay, was given a suspended sentence and six-month probationary term for possession of a narcotic.

Prosecutor Robert Johnston said Cameron's house was searched by Oak Bay police Oct. 24 and two pipes containing hashish residue in a closet were found.

★ ★ ★

Briant T. Thomas, 20, of 2308 Quadra, was given a suspended sentence and placed on probation for one year for theft under $200.

He was stopped in the 1100-block Haultain by Victoria police Aug. 21 while riding a bicycle.

He told police he had stolen the bicycle, valued at $100, from the rear of the Empress Hotel.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Roland John James Ryder, 49, of 2666 Deville, was sentenced to 14 days in prison by Judge Harold Alder for impaired driving.

He was convicted of the same offence in June, 1971.

BOOKS OBSCENE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fines totalling $5,500 were imposed Wednesday on a Vancouver book store and two employees for the possession and sale of obscene books.

G. and P. International News was fined $4,000 for possessing four obscene books for the purpose of sale and for selling one obscene book. Derek Judd, 44, was fined $1,250 on the same counts and Charles Escaravage, 57, was fined $250.

30 Face Charges

DELTA (CP) — A total of 30 adults and juveniles face charges as a result of two egg and rock throwing incidents here on Halloween night.

A Delta police spokesman said Wednesday 21 persons were arrested near a shopping centre in North Delta after police were pelted with eggs when they attempted to break up a noisy crowd.

Police were targets for eggs and rocks later in downtown Ladner, where nine other persons were arrested.

All 30 persons were released and will be charged by summons.

Study Tour of B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief John Fisk of Vancouver leaves today for a three-week tour of Britain to study policing techniques. The tour, sponsored by the British government, will include a lengthy study of the metropolitan force in London and a tour of electronic firms specializing in police communications. Police chiefs of Edmonton, Winnipeg and Halifax, and the director of the Quebec Provincial Police are also making the trip.

Drugs Overboard

VANCOUVER (CP) — Edward Madrid, 23, a marine engineer aboard the U.S. freighter Hawaii, docked here, will appear in provincial court here today, charged with importing narcotics and possessing marijuana for the purposes of trafficking. He was charged after police saw a man throw a crate overboard from the Hawaii. The crate was recovered and found to contain 16 pounds of marijuana.

Sunny Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver residents enjoyed the sunniest October in the city's history, with the weather office reporting 172 hours of sunshine for the month, exceeding the 1969 record by 9.1 hours. On the first day of November, rain fell.

Hunters Found

QUESNEL (CP) — Two hunters missing in the bush 30 miles east of here since Saturday were brought out Wednesday by helicopter. Police say Glen Hoppe, 26, and Albert Neufeld, 22, both of the McLeese Lake area of the Cariboo, are in good health.

Two-Thirds Ignore Chev Recall

DETROIT (AP) — Only one-third of 6.7 million Chevrolet owners in the United States have returned their cars for possibly crucial engine mount corrections in the largest recall in automotive history, the company says.

Announcing the results, Chevrolet Motor Division said it is sending second notices — 1,000 a day — to 4.6 million owners, urging them to take their cars back to the dealers for the free work.

The recall began Feb. 18, when Chevrolet, under pressure from federal safety officials, issued the recall for 1965-69 cars.

The recall work involves installing restraining cables on defective engine mounts. The mounts had shown a tendency to break, which resulted in jammed accelerators and several accidents, GM said.

Apartheid Fighter Here

Father Gonville ffrench-Beytagh, the Anglican priest who was sentenced to imprisonment for his fight against apartheid in South Africa, will speak at 8 tonight in Christ Church Cathedral.

The clergyman was sentenced to five years on charges of distributing pamphlets calling for guerrilla warfare and taking part in terrorist activities.

The charges were later dismissed by the Supreme Court.

He now lives in London, England.

Urban transit: concrete answers from Ottawa awaited

Election Confuses Transit Issue

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Canada's post-election political confusion has left Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer wondering if B.C. can pin any hopes on an Ottawa assurance of "substantial" federal funds for urban transit expansion.

But, in an interview Wednesday, Lorimer said the first stage of the provincial government's program for improving and developing public transportation will definitely go ahead — whether or not the federal assistance is forthcoming.

This first phase, Lorimer said, will be to provide more buses "as quickly as possible" for B.C. Hydro's services in Victoria, Vancouver and elsewhere on the Lower Mainland.

How quickly, he wouldn't say, but pointed out that it takes at least 10 months to a year for new buses to be delivered. And he isn't placing any orders "this week."

Lorimer said in recent correspondence with federal urban affairs minister Ron Basford he received an indication that the Liberal government would help finance the upgrading of provincial transportation systems.

This was as it should be because, like roads and bridges which also received federal funds, transit is a responsibility of Ottawa as well as a local and provincial responsibility.

"I had hoped to be able to get some concrete proposals and get together with the minister so he could spell out exactly what he was referring to in this field," Lorimer said.

"My problem is that now I don't know who the minister is, or will be, or if he will be minister for very long . . ."

Lorimer said the second phase of the transit program will be to study the whole question of whether there is a need for "a more sophisticated type of transportation system" in the larger centres such as Vancouver.

"Without any study I don't think, personally, there is a need in the immediate future," he said.

Whatever service is provided, it remains to be settled who would operate it—Hydro, the provincial government, regional districts or some type of Crown corporation with representation from the local areas.

"That's open to discussion; we don't really care who runs it," Lorimer said, adding that the provincial government is not hung-up on the principle that transit must be run at a profit.

"We appreciate the fact that it is going to cost the provincial government a fair amount of money but we think it is our responsibility to provide this."

In any case, he noted, there would be a saving to cities in the long term because they would be spared "the criss-cross of freeways which destroys a city both socially and from the aesthetic point of view."

The minister reflected that the ideal to aim for will be a public transit system that is good enough to break British Columbians free from their reliance on and faithful attachment to the automobile.

"We've been glued to our cars for an awful long time and it's going to take almost a shot of dynamite to get us out of them," he added.

DRUG FLICK LICKED?

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

A $30,000 drug education film which shows a girl in hospital after a drug overdose is having a bad trip of its own.

Commissioned by the Socred government and supervised by former deputy travel minister Ron Worley, the film was nearly finished when the Socreds were crushed in the September election. Worley was fired by the NDP government.

Now the 30-minute movie, called A Long Road Back, sits on a shelf in a stack of cans — "Finished" in a different sense unless the new government approves $3,000 for its completion.

The film was supposed to be financed by a grant from another Socred brainchild, the Drug, Alcohol and Cigarette Education, Prevention and Rehabilitation Fund.

However, few of the bills have been paid and Vancouver film-maker Ray Purdy is in the red for most of the film's costs.

"The music and the final mix need doing, that's all," Purdy told the Times. "I certainly hope the new government decides to finish it soon."

Fund co-ordinator Peter Battison, an ex-Saanich policeman who took the job earlier this year, says the film would be circulated free to B.C. schools when ready for screening.

He said the film was made entirely on location in Victoria featuring local students, housewives and a Victoria psychiatrist. Journalist Bill Thomas and Worley were in charge, with Purdy handling production.

Purdy said A Long Road Back shows a girl in hospital following a "bad trip" resulting from an overdose of an unnamed drug. The film shows the pressures from the girl's peers and problems at home, and indicates the problem of recovering.

It ends on a positive note as the girl, who has described her memories through poetry, leaves mental hospital and reacts to the sounds, sights and smells of the outside world.

A Long Road Back is designed for secondary school students.

"I think it's going to be a winner," Battison commented.

Education department official John Meredith said he understood all special funds set up by the former government were under review in the normal course of government takeover by a new regime.

Aldermen Hassle Open Space Dude

Victoria Times
THURSDAY, NOV. 2, 1972 11
SECOND SECTION

Open Space may be a centre for cultural activities in Old Town, but for one city alderman the name conjures up visions of those wide vistas down on the range.

When Open Space director Gene Miller applied today for a $9,100 grant from city council, finance committee chairman Ald. Tom Christie questioned him like this:

"Is this your brainchild? What is it? I'm thinking of wide open spaces . . . there's a song to that effect I believe."

★

Miller, who two weeks ago submitted an 18-page brief explaining the background, activities and aims of the centre at 506 and 510 Fort Street, claimed that in the 18 months Open Space had been operating it had made "a valuable contribution" to Victoria's cultural life.

The committee eventually recommended refusal of the grant application, but not before Christie — occasionally supported by Ald. Harold Olafson — had given Miller a thorough questioning session.

Christie wanted to know why the city should approve "a great big whopping grant like this," when its work was cut out trying to help such established cultural organizations as the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

★

And Olafson said he couldn't understand why Open Space didn't join forces with a group such as the Bastion Theatre.

To that, Miller replied the reason was that the two organizations were not performing the same functions.

Christie also asked about Miller's background, and Miller answered he was a landed immigrant from New York.

Miller told the committee every effort was made to appeal to a wide range of interests in the activities arranged at Open Space, and to avoid it becoming a focus for the young "and the long-hairs, because I think that would be the death of the project."

Public Given Lakes Access

Highways Minister Bob Strachan has turned down requests by the YM-YWCA's Camp Thunderbird Society and the Boy Scouts to cut off public access to Glintz and Young Lakes in Sooke.

The two organizations had asked the highways department to close part of Glintz Lake Road and Young Lake Road to prevent outsiders going through their camps in the area to reach the lakes.

Strachan said Wednesday he made his decision on the recommendation of department officials.

Strachan had earlier said he was against such closures.

On Wednesday he added that, instead of closures, he hoped to make more recreation areas available to the public.

As required by law, the department advertised a notice of closure Sept. 19. People wishing to make submissions in writing had until Oct. 16 to do so.

Strachan reported that the submissions received were 20 to one against the closures.

Q. If an old-age-pensioner decided to go back to England to live permanently after 45 years in Canada could she still receive the Canadian old age pension and where do you apply for the information for the same? — B.L.B.

A. If you are now receiving the pension and have resided in Canada for 25 years after your 21st birthday you can continue to receive the cheques indefinitely. If you are now receiving the cheques but do not meet the residence requirements then the pension is only payable for the month of departure plus six additional months. After that time payment is suspended until you return to Canada.

However, if you are not currently receiving the pension and leave the country before you are 65 you may only receive the cheques if you resided in Canada for 40 years after your 18th birthday before leaving. You can apply for the pension from abroad. There are various other detailed requirements to be met in the latter case.

Mayor's Trip Up in Air After Vote

Victoria's finance committee today recommended approval of an estimated $500 expenses for Mayor Peter Pollen to attend the first-ever tri-level conference on urban affairs, scheduled for Nov. 20 and 21 in Toronto.

But city manager Bill Hooson told the committee that in view of the confused political situation resulting from the election, no one knows whether the meeting will be cancelled.

The invitation to attend came from the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

Appeal Goes to Youth As Campaign Falls Shy

United Appeal organizers may fall back on high school student helpers to try to collect the $328,000 target by closing date Nov. 15.

Chairman Shirley Dowell announced the closing date along with figures showing that the charity campaign is lagging seriously with only 43.5 per cent — $148,000 — of the target donated.

The campaign still needs 300 canvassers to cover Colwood, Langford, Burnside, Marigold, Tulip and Central Saanich. "So many people were out knocking on doors in both the recent elections — it's been hard to get them out again," Mrs. Dowell said.

She said she was considering approaching school principals about getting student helpers.

Another major problem facing the appeal is collectors failing to pick up and return donation "kits." Kits, containing envelopes, blank cheques, receipts, etc., are circulated by collectors to potential donors. A second call is then made to pick up the donations.

"There is no doubt that money is sitting in these kits waiting to be picked up," Mrs. Dowell said.

She warned that any shortfall in the appeal would have to be shouldered by the 24 participating agencies, which may be required to reduce their budgets, she said.

She said individual agencies might decide to revert to the former practice of conducting their own campaigns.

Mrs. Dowell said Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall had written to her supporting the campaign. She said Victoria Labor Council had also endorsed the appeal.

Vancouver's campaign has reached 65 per cent of its target, an "acceptable" figure, she said.

Police Press Probe Of Pins in Apples

A detective said it has been learned where the apples came from, but not the pins. He did not wish to comment further but did say no charges are contemplated at this stage.

Discovery of the pins was made Wednesday when Mrs. George Turner, 929 Empress, began to make an apple pie. There was a sharp pin in each apple, embedded head first and so deeply the points were under the skin.

George Turner accompanied his three children on Halloween rounds last year because he had heard of stories of apples containing razor blades. But he couldn't go with the children this year because he was working.

Police have asked parents to check thoroughly for pins and similar items in Halloween handouts.

Best Missions Were Flights of Fancy

By AL FORREST

"Authors should be read and not seen."

So says aviation author Ernest K. Gann. He was in Victoria Wednesday evening, addressing the Air Transport Association of Canada's wind-up banquet.

"Most of my characters are young, curly-haired, almost seven feet tall and very dashing," he said.

"Well, you see me as I am. Nothing can fulfill the human imagination."

Gann, 62, ex-pilot and author of The High and The Mighty, Fate Is The Hunter and other air adventures, lives in semi-retirement on his 200-acre farm at Friday Harbor in the San Juans.

He laughs at reports he is the wealthiest pilot since Howard Hughes, insists he has to keep writing to make ends meet.

★ ★ ★

However, six of his 13 novels are now successful movies and his books sell briskly at $7 a copy.

Gann flew over 15,000 hours with the U.S. Air Transport Command during World War Two and used his war experiences for his early novels.

He still flies a twin-engined amphibious Royal Gull about 400 hours a year for business and pleasure.

In his address to the four-day ATAC annual meeting at the Empress Hotel, Gann said he suspected he was invited because of his books, not his aerial proficiency.

"That was all right with him because he was very high on books. He quoted the school child who wrote: "A book can make you laugh or cry. Nothing else so small can do so much."

He said he was probably invited because of his adventures as a Zeppelin commander in London during World War One. He recalled a mission in 1916 . . . dropping bombs here-and-there and being awarded an Iron Cross for each successful hit.

The arithmetic says he was seven years old at the time.

Some of his best missions, he said, were flights of fancy.

Turning to the real world of flying, he recalled an early civilian airline route where he was pilot of a four-engined plane that flew all right at 3,000 feet. Above that level the engines conked out.

"Not all at the same time, you understand. First this one and then that one. They would eventually come back on. They were all rugged individualists."

Of such stuff was born The High and the Mighty, a story of a plane in trouble.

Turning to the present, Gann warned the airline officials not to be too smug about air service today. In some cases, he said, people flew from Toronto to Montreal 30 years ago in half the time it takes today.

"In those days time used to be spent in flying toward the destination rather than circling over it."

And the future?

Within a decade, he predicted, atomic or rocket-assisted takeoffs will be in regular use on conventional aircraft. He says normal cruising altitudes of 150,000 feet will be common, and unconventional fuels will be in use.

Gann said the speed-up of air travel has broken down the barriers between nations, a mixed blessing.

★ ★ ★

"The safeguards of distance are gone. Now we must be friends with every neighbor or our very expertise will bring catastrophe."

He said politicians and heads of state should spend at least 100 hours aloft a year.

Then, he said, there might be some hope they would look at the world with a new understanding and resolve that all nations must live in peace.

Sinking Cougars A Real Puzzle

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The Cougars have impressed the Medicine Hat coach twice, but each time the Tigers pulled away with all the points in their Western Canada Junior Hockey League meetings.

The Tigers bagged their latest decision Wednesday night by dropping the Cougars 7-3 before 1,039 fans at Memorial Arena. It was the Cougars' sixth straight defeat.

Tigers Started It

Medicine Hat started the Victoria skid by defeating the Cougars 5-3 three weeks ago.

"After our first meeting," said Shupe, "I thought Victoria had the best team on the Coast." He liked the Cougars better than Vancouver Nats or New Westminster Bruins.

Four "new" faces showed up in Victoria's lineup Wednesday, and Shupe again thought the Cougars "came up tough."

"There was a time I thought Victoria was going to chase us out of their rink in the second period. If you look at the shots-on-goal, we only got 14 in the last two periods, and I thought my guys played their best game in about three weeks," he added.

But a rival coach's respect may be poor consolation for Victoria coach Mitch Pechet and his players. The points went the other way because, as in four of Victoria's past six games, Cougars' rivals cashed in quickly and easily for their goals.

Cougars came up with a few good points Wednesday, but the bad ones hurt most and are remembered best.

The example was served by Tom Lysiak when the slick centre scored Medicine Hat's sixth goal. The Tigers had been hemmed in their own zone for approximately 50 seconds. Despite that domination, Cougars couldn't score. The 'Hatters finally were able to get the puck out of their own zone and it was relayed to Lysiak at the Victoria blueline. With nothing better to do, he let go with a quick shot that eluded Victoria goalie Sam Clegg.

Glaring defensive miscues, rather than good plays by the attackers, contributed directly to three other Medicine Hat goals. And that's how it has been going for Cougars during the past two weeks.

Centre Ed Johnstone got the Tigers off and running with a pair within eight seconds in the dying moments of the opening period. Winger Lanny McDonald also bagged two while singles went to Boyd Anderson, Paul Granchukoff and Lysiak.

Dale Cook, Brad Richardson and Dave Faulkner scored for the Cougars.

Newcomers Look Good

Richardson was one of the four new players inserted into the Victoria lineup. If it matters, all four came up with strong performances.

Richardson, Carl Cureatz and Bob Jeffrey were recalled from Nanaimo Clippers. Cureatz and Jeffery teamed up with speedster Al McLaren, and the "kid line" was unfortunate in not scoring.

McLaren and Jeffery each missed two great chances to score.

Defenceman Ed Bucha, obtained this week from Swift Current Broncos, also looked good in his first game as a Cougar. He passed well and, more important to Clegg, was not afraid to clear foreign bodies from in front of the Victoria goal.

People and Things And Purists Exposed

To whom it may concern, and also to the reader who asked:

Snell has been hospitalized by a ruptured spleen, and probably won't ever play again. Snell was the back to whom Joe Namath gave the ball on six consecutive plays in the closing seconds of Superbowl 111, when the Jets were killing the clock, and the Colts with it. As Dave Anderson of the New York Times so aptly puts it: "Snell's career is over, his body weakened and wounded by the game he played so well."

Apparently some reporters don't know the difference between racism and superstition, or so says Otis Taylor of the Kansas City Chiefs. In an article in Sport Magazine, Otis tells it: "Reporters get confused when they travel with us on a plane and they see Dave Hill and Ed Buddle always sitting together, or two black guys like Emmitt Thomas and Cesar Belsar together every flight. They think it's racism, but what it really is is superstition. They sit together for protection. If they sit in the same place with the same guy, the plane's not gonna crash, y'know."

There are also some other stories of lightish vein in the same issue. One concerns Bronko Nagurski, the great Chicago Bears fullback of the 30s. Retired referee Ronnie Gibbs tells of one incident when Nagurski was fooling around in a second-floor hotel room with a teammate and fell out the window. A crowd gathered, and when a policeman came up, he asked Nagurski: "What happened?" Nagurski answered: "I don't know, I just got here myself."

Learn-a-fact-a-day dept.: The Chicago Bulls led the National Basketball Association in technical fouls last season. With 74 indiscretions of the bad-mouth variety, at $50 a pop, the Bulls paid out $3,700 in fines. That's a lot of talk.

A new curler in town is Dr. Gordon Howden, eye specialist, formerly of Nanaimo, and a member of Don MacRae's championship Seagram rink of 1970. Howden has opened an office here. Meanwhile, Sandy Hucul is again coaching at Phoenix in the WHL, Milan Marcetta is at Denver as a player, Bob Barlow at Phoenix, John Van Horlick at Portland, Colin Kilburn is the GM at Roanoke Valley, and, oh yes, old man river, Andy Hebenton is again at Portland . . . Then there's a press release from Seattle that all football and baseball fans should be interested in. "After years of planning, discussion, and the usual amount of community discord, the beginning of construction on the west's first multi-purpose, covered stadium is due to start here officially on Nov. 2." Hey, that's today!

Which means NFL football, in time, at our back door, with former pro and college star Hugh McElhenny as general manager of the Seattle Kings, a group seeking an NFC franchise for Seattle, in charge. And with the announcement, a built-in warning to the B.C. Lions: Produce, or all roads will lead to Seattle on the weekends . . the stadium will be ready for occupancy in about two years . . . seating capacity for football fans will be 65,000, for baseball 60,000; the dome will rise 250 feet above the ground, and will be 660 feet in diameter . . . and all the comforts will be air-conditioned . . . Sounds great, doesn't it?

Or did you know that: Wilt Chamberlain once made 28 free first 500 pages of the Manhattan telephone book, and all of The Godfather . . . Cougar goalie Sam Clegg should be a capable enough netminder this season, if he gets help up front . . . that one-time star receivers Bob Hayes and Lance Alworth are no longer on the starting team at Dallas, the Cowboys have that much depth (paging Jackie Parker) . . . the first four regular batters in the Oakland lineup hit only .129 in the World Series . . . Pat Thompson, a former Consols rep, was lined up at third for Keith Dagg in a practice curling game last week . . . if Gaylord Perry is the best pitcher in the American League, as voted this week, it's not what pitching coaches in the majors think. Their choice for the outstanding pitcher is Mickey Lolich of Detroit, Tom Seaver was second, Bob Gibson third and Steve Carlton fourth . . . Coach Gary Taylor sees a good season ahead for his UVic basketball team (and don't forget the UVic-Vic College basketball reunion dinner Friday) . . . Canada's best chance yet to win the Laurel International horse race on Nov. 11 may come with Belle Geste, a four-year-old filly, owned by Bill Latimer, a Toronto stockbroker . . . One thing that is hard to understand is how whole hockey teams, i.e., Nanaimo, can forget registration dates, and naturally end up being suspended. There is no excuse . . . and finally nobody is going to believe this) but George Crombie and Stan Williams have gone, or are going, to a "meat line," for Saanich Inlet fishing . . . or as guide Jim Gilbert once said: "I think it's a nicer sight to see Roy Smith (one of the most proficient of Island fishermen) coming up the dock with a basin full of fish, than to see somebody else with a hollow smile on his face," or words to that effect . . . Now, however, the last of the purists have succumbed, their shame showing, their credibility crumbling.

New Basketball Team To Open Against Clan

Scorpion Men's Wear, the only senior "A" squad on Vancouver Island, tackles Simon Fraser University Alumni in a pair of games to kick off an exhibition schedule.

Games will start at 8:30 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday.

Bob Burrows, an Oak Bay High School hoop star who is now a professional baseball player with the Kansas City organization, is the Scorpion playing-coach.

Other Oak Bay grads on the roster are Bob's Brother, Don, who starred while attending Green River Community College in Seattle, and Tom Child, a B.C. high school all-star and University of Victoria player.

Also on the team are Ollie Moilanen, most valuable player with the old Inter-City League; Dave Mulcahy, another Green River star; Barry Burch, an Esquimalt grad; Leon Mitchell, from Reynolds; Mike Chornoby of Victoria High as well as Gordie Hoshal, John Lauvaas, Brian Brumwell and Mike Taaffe of UVic.

Considering some of the players on the Simon Fraser squad, the games this weekend should provide plenty of action.

Included on the visiting lineup are Gary Smith, a member of Canadian Olympic and Pan-American teams; Glen Orris, a professional football player who has seen action with Winnipeg Blue Bombers and is currently attached to B.C. Lions; Ron Walsh, an all-time leading scorer at Queen's University in Ontario; and Bill Robinson, a Chemainus native who has represented Canada in several international competitions.

Lysiak Regains Lead in Scoring

Medicine Hat centre Tom Lysiak is back on top of the Western Canada Major Junior Hockey League's individual scoring list.

Last season's scoring champion with 143 points, Lysiak counted a goal and three assists Wednesday as the Tigers tripped Victoria Cougars 7-3 at Memorial Arena. The spree boosted Lysiak's total to 29 points, two more than the injured Ron Chipperfield of Brandon Wheat Kings and Medicine Hat's Lanny McDonald.

McDonald picked up two goals and an assist Wednesday.

Captain Dale Cook is Cougar's top scorer with 17 points.

In Wednesday's only other game, Calgary's Jerry Holland fired four goals as the Centennials dumped Winnipeg Jets 7-5 in Calgary.

Top Netminder's Average Is Battered by Blazers

By The Canadian Press

The former Boston Bruin netminder in the National Hockey League had a 1.53 goals-allowed average going into Wednesday night's game against Philadelphia Blazers.

But the Blazers, in last place in the East, fired seven goals behind Cheevers Wednesday night to down the Crusaders 7-5.

In other games, Minnesota Fighting Saints, cellar dwellers in the West, shut out West Division-leading Winnipeg Jets 3-0 and New England Whalers defeated Chicago Cougars 4-2.

Philadelphia, with only one victory in its first nine games, got four goals from Danny Lawson and some spectacular goaltending from Marcel Paille to beat Cleveland.

Paille kicked out 42 shots and Lawson scored three of the Blazers' first four goals. Derek Sanderson also scored for Philadelphia, beating Cheeves, his old Boston team-mate, on a breakaway.

The seven goals allowed by Cheevers, his old Boston against him this season. He had not given up more than three goals in any previous game.

FALTERING BLAZERS BUY A NEW DEFENCE

Times News Services

The faltering Philadelphia Blazers, with a 1-8 won-lost record in the World Hockey Association, went shopping to bolster their weak defence.

They came up with five new defencemen.

First, they obtained defenceman Larry Mavety from Los Angeles Sharks. Transactions swung into high gear when Philadelphia gave up centre Mike Rouleau and winger Frank Golembrosky to Quebec Nordiques for defenceman John Gravel and forward Brit Selby. Selby, 24, then was dealt to New England Whalers for Bob Brown, a 22-year-old defenceman.

Philadelphia later purchased Roger Cote and Derek Harker, both defencemen, from Alberta Oilers for "cash and future considerations."

Buffalo Bubble Explodes in 7-1 Setback

By The Canadian Press

Observers of the National Hockey League who wondered when the Buffalo bubble would burst got their answer Wednesday.

The Sabres from Buffalo, starting their third season in the NHL, were off to an unexpectedly fast start for an expansion team, holding with Montreal Canadiens the distinction of being the only undefeated teams in the NHL.

But Wednesday night Toronto Maple Leafs found their shooting range and put an end to the Sabres' unbeaten streak, defeating them 7-1, the Sabres first loss in 11 games.

Their loss leaves the Canadiens as the only undefeated team in the NHL. The Canadiens went into Pittsburgh and handed the Penguins a 7-1 drubbing, the worst defeat ever suffered at home by the Penguins.

Meanwhile, Detroit Red Wings, who started the season with six successive victories, suffered their fourth straight lost as they were beaten 4-2 in Detroit by Atlanta Flames, one of the new entries in the NHL this season.

In other games Wednesday night, New York Rangers scored three goals in three minutes and four seconds in the second period to beat Chicago Black Hawks 3-2, St. Louis Blues and Minnesota played to a 3-3 tie and New York Islanders downed California Golden Seals 6-2.

Wednesday night the Leafs held Rick Martin and Rene Robert scoreless although Gil Perreault skated around Leaf defenceman Joe Lundrigan to score Buffalo's only goal.

Jacques Lemaire and Marc Tardif each scored two goals for the Canadiens against the Penguins, and goalie Ken Dryden stopped 31 shots to thwart nearly every threat the Penguins were able to make.

The Wings, down 3-1 at the start of the third period, got a goal from Mickey Redmond at 57 seconds of the third period and made repeated scoring threats after that, but Bouchard withstood the pressure.

Lew Morrison and Randy Manery, who once played for Detroit, scored for Atlanta, and John Stewart scored into an empty net in the final seconds of the game.

The victory was Atlanta's fifth of the season, all away from home. The schedule for the expansion team put it on the road for 10 of its first 12 NHL games.

The Rangers' victory over the Black Hawks ran their unbeaten streak to seven games and moved them into third place in the East with 15 points, one behind Buffalo and five behind Montreal.

Three goals by Germain Gagno paced New York Islanders to their victory over the Golden Seals. He scored the first goal on a breakaway in the first period and his second and third in the final period.

SCOOTING past defenders, Chicago's Dennis Hull (10) scores goal in Wednesday's National Hockey League game against New York Rangers. Falling Rod Seiling (16) and fallen goalie Gilles Villemure are well out of play. Rangers, however, won game 3-2. (AP Wirephoto)

Island Hunters Aided By Unsettled Weather

Saturday marks the opening of the antlerless season on Vancouver Island for blacktail deer. The season, which extends to November 19, marks the period when hunter success reaches its peak. It covers the fall migration of the blacktails from their high summer ranges. It is when the annual "rut" occurs, and it includes the time of heavy southeast storms with their unsettling effect on wildlife. Together, they give the hunter superb sport.

Identification skills are quickly learned by most hunters. Others in the field have a responsibility to facilitate this, particularly during any sex seasons on big game. Deer and other animals cannot see color, only varying shades of grey. For this reason color becomes the obvious identification mark. As an ardent hunter, I would strongly recommend that the wearing of a patch of blaze fluorescent orange clothing become mandatory on Vancouver Island, but only during the antlerless season on deer.

Sportsmen, have you read the upcoming regulation, page eight of the 1972 hunting regulations?

I quote: "It is the intention of the fish and wildlife branch to recommend legislation next year (1973) making mandatory the wearing of a blaze orange vest or outer garment when hunting upland birds and big game during the general open seasons."

Here we go once again, back to the BLANKET management regulations of the 50s and early 60s. It is inconceivable to parallel sheep hunting in the north, or elk hunting in the Kootenays, or pheasant hunting in the Okanagan, with deer hunting on Vancouver Island. Each has its own special set of circumstances which must be regulated individually. Wildlife officials, let us not regress now! We, the sportsmen, and yourselves have fought too long against this blanket management and regulation concept.

★ ★ ★

This form of regulation smacks of the all-encompassing restriction slapped on new and young Vancouver Island hunters this year. I have already had personal visits and telephone calls this fall from fledgling hunters unable to get out this season because they cannot take the required course because it isn't available. Organized sportsmen have always been for mandatory training of young and new hunters, but not under the senseless planning of this regulation.

If you don't feel the pinch on your rights, hunters, look around you. How many youngsters are not out in the woods this weekend because it is illegal for them to carry a firearm?

A decade of these blanket restrictions will see us all locking up our guns.

Sportsmen, a letter to the director of the fish and wildlife branch, Victoria, is a must if we are to halt this senile concept!

A recent release from the wildlife branch shows the total wildlife harvest of all game species during the past two decades. 1968 was the peak harvest year for all game species except caribou and grouse, which peaked in 1967. The season of 1971 produced the lowest deer harvest since 1957 with a drop from the 1968 high of 77,013 to a low in 1971 of 56,117.

Hunting licence sales reached their highest point in 1970 with 153,424 resident-licence sales. 1971 saw a slight decline of about 500 sales. This population doubles that of the early fifties with about 76,000 resident hunters. In the same period the non-resident population has almost trebled with a high of 7,311 in 1970.

Non-resident effort is centred on the major big game species — moose, goat, sheep, caribou and grizzly bear. Non-residents almost doubled the bag of residents for mountain sheep in 1970 with 429 animals as compared to residents 223. The grizzly bear bag was 232 for non-residents and 159 for residents. Residents exceeded non-residents for caribou and goat.

One statistic I had from guides near the Alaska Highway this summer was that one sheep was worth $3,000 to the northern guide or outfitter. With a total of 652 sheep being harvested in 1971, this one species is providing a possible direct industry worth $2,000,000. This is two-thirds of the budget allotted to the fish and wildlife branch for the management of ALL wildlife in this province.

NHL Wants to Run Show

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — The National Hockey League's board of governors appointed a five-man committee Wednesday to work with the NHL Players' Association on future international competition.

"Our first step in pursuing future international competition will be to review the entire matter with our players association and its representatives," said NHL president Clarence Campbell at the conclusion of a three-day meeting.

"Once we and the players have determined whether a continued program of international competition is desirable, we would expect to open negotiations with teams and leagues from other countries, including, of course, Russia and Czechoslovakia," said Campbell.

Don Ruck, NHL vice-president, said no date was set for the meeting with the players, but it would be sought "as rapidly as possible."

Ruck said the board of governors discussed the possibility of individual NHL teams rather than an all-star team playing internationally and also scheduling any competition away from the opening of NHL training camps, but said no decisions were reached pending the discussions with the players.

"In considering future international competition, we wish from the outset to clearly establish several binding principles," said Campbell.

"First, any future international hockey competition involving NHL players will be determined and controlled by the NHL and the NHL Players' Association.

"Second, the NHL team owners and our players alone will determine the terms and conditions of such competition with other teams and leagues from countries throughout the world," said Campbell.

Mt. Doug Tops Vic

Mt. Douglas capped off an unbeaten streak by toppling defending-champion Victoria High in the final of the lower Vancouver Island high school boys' volleyball championship on Wednesday.

Mt. Douglas won the "B" section of the preliminary round-robin competition with a 6-0 record and then went on to drop host Victoria, 15-11, 15-7.

Reynolds and Belmont tied for second spot in the "B" section with 3-3 records but the former school picked up the runner-up position because of a better points-for-and-against record. Esquimalt, the fourth team in the "B" section, finished with six losses.

Victoria, the league champions, won the "A" section with a 5-1 record. Mount View won the runner-up spot despite tying Claremont because of two victories over the latter club. Oak Bay finished fourth.

Reynolds defeated Mount View 16-14, 15-6 in the consolation final which determined the final lower Island berth in the Island championship tournament.

Mt. Douglas, Victoria and Reynolds will all play in the Island event Nov. 11 at a site yet to be determined.

PORT ALBERNI — Port Alberni Labatts of the Pacific Coast Amateur Hockey League defeated University of Victoria Vikings 5-3 in an exhibition game Wednesday night.

Labatts, an intermediate "A" club, led 4-3 at the end of the second period after trading single tallies with UVic in the first frame.

Keith Ralston led Port Alberni with three goals while singles were added by Gerald Shiner and Selby Statz. Scott Munro, Dave Cousins and Larry Hackman scored for Vikings.

Top Hurler Unanimous Selection

NEW YORK (AP) — To the surprise of absolutely no one, Philadelphia's Steve Carlton has won the Cy Young Award as the best pitcher in the National League.

Carlton was the unanimous choice of the 24-man committee of baseball writers—two from each National League city—for the honor after turning in a remarkable 27-10 record for the last-place Phillies.

The lean left-hander, who accounted for 46 per cent of Philadelphia's 59 victories last season, is only the sixth unanimous selection in the 16-year history of the balloting and the first Phillie ever to win the award. He also is the first man to win the award while pitching for a last-place team.

Phils' Pilot A Surprise

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Danny Ozark, a player, minor league manager and coach in Los Angeles Dodgers' baseball organization since 1942, was named manager of the National League Philadelphia Phillies Wednesday.

The 48-year-old Ozark was the surprise choice of Phillies general manager Paul Owens. The name of Ozark, third-base coach of the Dodgers, wasn't mentioned among the dozen or more candidates considered for the job.

Ozark succeeds Owens as the field manager. Owens took over the manager's job last July when he fired Frank Lucchesi. He said then he would lead the club only until the end of the season.

Victoria Golfer at 225

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — A seven-under-par 65 moved Larry Stubblefield of Hawaii into the lead Wednesday at the halfway point in the annual Professional Golfers' Association qualifying tournament.

Stubblefield's score gave him a 54-hole total of 213.

He is three under par for the tournament and one stroke in front of Victor Regalado of Medico, leader in the first two rounds.

Regalado carded an even-par 72 to put his three-day total at 214.

PGA officials decided at the conclusion of play Wednesday that the low 22 scorers plus ties in this field of 81 golfers will be issued playing cards for the 1973 PGA professional golf four.

Generosity Costs Athletics' Owner

NEW YORK (AP) — Bowie Kuhn, commissioner of baseball, has fined Charles O. Finley, ower of the world champion Oakland Athletics, $2,500 for giving increased compensation to two of his players during the World Series.

The commissioner said Finley's action violated the baseball rule forbidding incentive payments.

Finley announced during the recent series that he was giving catcher Gene Tenace and outfielder Joe Rudi $5,000 each.

Mike Hegan, substitute first baseman, also was given $5,000 but since this was related to his regular season performance, Kuhn said there was no violation.

WE HAD A LOT TO CONSIDER WHEN WE BUILT CORTINA

Potholes, ruts, rust, rain, ice, snow, wet roads, dry roads, unexpected stops, parking lot bumps, sudden curves, and anything else an economy import might come up against in Canada.

We did our best to make Cortina tough enough to handle any hardships Canada could dish out. And come out ahead.

To handle the roughest roads, Cortina has a Short and Long Arm front suspension, designed for a quieter ride and improved handling. The traditional rear leaf springs are replaced by a 4-bar link system. It controls the location of the rear axle during cornering, virtually eliminating any tendency to "axle hop".

To handle high-speed highway driving, Cortina has a 2-litre Overhead Camshaft engine. It has plenty of torque for quick acceleration and effortless freeway cruising, without sacrificing economy. And in the city, where driving is often stop-and-go, Cortina's power front disc brakes give straight, fast stops.

There's a new energy-absorbing bumper system. In the front it consists of a heavy steel bumper, a full-width steel reinforcement behind the bumper, large mounting brackets and two Ford Motor Company designed impact-absorbing devices mounted to the front of the frame.

And to resist the salt-soaked slush that causes rust Cortina's body has a special rust resisting electro-coated phosphate undercoating.

Those are just some of the features built into every Cortina to handle the rigorous driving conditions it might come up against in Canada.

On the inside, we had a different set of priorities. Comfort and convenience.

The fitted loop-pile carpeting, not only adds a luxury touch to Cortina, but also acts as a sound insulation against road noise.

The convenient front and rear grab handles were designed to assist entry and exit.

In short, we built everything into Cortina that would make it a tough and durable little car, with all the comfort you want.

And with nearly everything already standard, the list of options is very short. There's the silk-smooth 3-speed automatic transmission and the dealer installed radio. And that's all.

Test drive the 2- or 4-door sedans or the sporty 2-door GT. You'll find we considered a lot when we built Cortina, and it all adds up to a better car for you.

Cortina. Consider it.

Victoria Labor Leader Sees Changing Soviet Ways

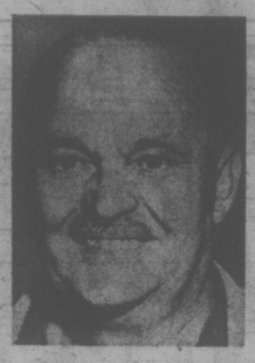
By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

The winds of change may be whistling through the seemingly-monolithic Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

In Moscow, at least, this was one impression gleaned by Stan Ball, a Victorian recently returned from a three-week visit to the U.S.S.R.

A month or so before he left for his visit, a translation of a leaflet said to have been distributed in some Moscow apartments and public places appeared in the AFL-CIO Free Trade Union News.

Ball said Wednesday night he has seen the original of this leaflet, and verified it through a translation.



BALL
. . . finds discontent

It was issued by a group describing itself as The Citizens Committee, and in strident terms denounces the rulers of Russia.

It assails 1961 promises of an end to the housing shortage in 10 years and improvements in the cost of living.

"Citizens! Our land has the richest resources in the world; it is the second industrial power of the world, Yet in terms of the standard of living of the working people the U.S.S.R. occupies only the 26th place in the world, the last place among the developed countries.

"Our worker can buy for the wages he earns 7 to 12 times less than the American, English or West German worker.

"Why so? Because an enormous share of these riches has been appropriated by the ruling top — appropriated secretly and openly.

"These riches are used to pay for their luxury living, for their dachas, villas, the 'Chaika' cars, for their huge salaries, for their special allowances, for the extra rations, hidden from the people, for special health resorts, hospitals and sanitoria . . . The Kremlin rulers and their parasites live better than did many of the Czar's high officials before the revolution. Yet they call themselves 'the vanguard,' its servants . . ."

It also complains of the "people's wealth" being sent abroad, in exports, spending in China, support for the People's Republic of Vietnam, Cuba and the Arabs.

"Citizens! In our country there is no socialism. It is not socialism when the average wage of a worker is 100 rubles, while the income of high officials is several thousand rubles a month. It is not socialism when the people are deprived of elementary rights: freedom of speech, and of the press, the right to strike, etc. We are not going towards communism — these are all lies.

The translated version says "our people are rising to fight for their rights. Strikes and demonstations are taking place in Novocherkassk, Temir Tau, Cherdyn, Leningrad and Moscow. Many of our scientists and writers are protesting against the deprivation of rights of their people. You should fight too. Demand political freedoms, the lowering of prices, an increase in wages, the lowering of incomes of the Kremlin powerholders."

Ball read the English language version to delegates of the Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night because he thought it would help answer their questions. He went to the Soviet Union as one of several members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, which has a program of sending groups of members to 24 different countries every two years.

Ball described his good and bad impressions of his visit while emphasizing he is "not knocking it" and would love to pay a return visit.

His words proved to be music to Larry Tickner, a carpenters union delegate, who frequently tells labor council delegates of his view that Communism in the Soviet Union is simply the substitution of state capitalism over the private capitalism of the pre-1917 revolution days.

Tickner said this view has been voiced by the Socialist Party of Canada, of which he is a member, for the last 50 years, and views similar to this and those in the English version of the leaflet were expressed by some Russians in the years immediately after the 1917 revolution.

What wasn't clear was whether the views in the English language version of the leaflet represent what might be called, by some, right wing revisionism, seeking a return to pre-1917 days, or another view that the Bolshevik victors in the revolution simply substituted their own revisionism of "true" communism.

That issue, about the "true" inheritors of the philosophy of Marx and others, has historically divided a number of "socialist" groups.

Tough Russian Solution To Drinking on the Job

The good and the bad in the Soviet Union were described by Stan Ball Wednesday.

He ranged from Moscow — "the drabbest city, the people look unhappy, never smiling" to smaller cities where the people are "the same as you and me."

Ball, president of the Victoria local of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, was speaking to Victoria Labor Council delegates about his three-week tour, during which he visited 17 ports.

Every two years, the ILWU sends small groups of members to 24 countries, and Ball and several U.S. union members were guests of the 750,000-member Sea and River Workers Union.

"What we saw, no tourist would see," he said. "Where we asked to go, we got there."

He spoke of drinking on the job, a problem the Russians share with the rest of the world. The Soviet solution is a tough one.

But it exists within a slighly different framework for dockers — each gang is on a piece work basis, so the group disciplines itself.

The first time a Russian longshoreman is drunk on the job, he is suspended for a day without pay.

The second time — it is reported to the state and he is put on a menial job, such as cleaning streets, without pay, for 15 days. If he has a family, the state takes care of it. Then he spends seven days in a sanitorium.

The third time — he is kicked out of the longshore gang and replaced.

Regarding Russian treatment of Jews, Ball said there isn't persecution. The official attitude is that they are free to leave "but pay us what it cost to educate you. There are 115 nationalities there and the same principle applies."

He said children are always in school, and state law requires that everyone who is physically capable must work.

The cost of living was "very cheap" — a filet mignon and five-course meal was less than $1 — but this "pretty well equals out with the lower wages."

He saw queues half a block long and six-deep for potatoes in Moscow — but nothing similar in other cities.

In dock techniques, he said the Russians are "far ahead of us," relying heavily on dockside cranes and not offloading ships with their own cranes. Most crane operators are women.

He saw a floating crane which will have a 700-ton lift.

Ball emphasized that he wasn't knocking the Soviet Union in any of his critical comments. "I loved every minute of it and would go back tomorrow."

But, he said, he suspected that if a Moscow man was plonked on a street in Canada, he would beg to stay. If a Canadian was put on a street in Moscow, he would beg to come back.

BANKRUPTCIES SLAMMED

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being lost to construction workers because of small operators who run through a series of bankruptcies under different corporate names, the Victoria Labor Council was told Wednesday night.

John Schibli, president of the Victoria local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, said his union has "five active files" on companies which owe money to members of his local.

He said the construction industry has "the wrost record" for bankruptcies.

Small companies operating from "2 by 4 offices" will skip the last payroll or two before a job ends "and the guys will be left holding the bag for up to $1,000 each."

Then the operator will file bankruptcy, only to re-open under a different name "quite legitimately."

Schibli said his union is asking the attorney-general "to stop this nonsense" and mentioned that other countries prevent a bankrupt from re-entering business for a period of years.

When some union members picketed a company whose predecessor company owed several thousand dollars in fringe benefits, they were served with an ex-parte injunction, he said. "If ever there was a moral case for picketing, this was it," he said.

MAN LISTED FAIR AFTER BOAT BLAZE

The fire occurred when Manuel Garcia, 31, of 53 South Turner, was working on a 14-foot fiberglass runabout boat which broke into flames.

He was taken to hospital with burns on both legs.

The View Royal volunteer fire department was called but the fire was out when they arrived.

The boat was a total loss, a spokesman said.

WHY MEN DIE YOUNGER

Why do women outlive men? Are men biologically weaker? Or does society expect too much of men? Undoubtedly, both factors play a role. But there are ways in which we can remedy the situation. November Reader's Digest shows how our basic biases about masculinity often result in pressures and frustrations which can kill a man. Here are rules your family should learn by heart—to help fathers and sons live longer, fuller lives. Be sure to read WHY MEN DIE YOUNGER — one of 38 articles and features in the November Reader's Digest. At your newsstand today!

Don't look at it as a stereo.

We have another reason for choosing Electrohome stereo. And that's what you can do with it after you get it home.

For a start, you can add an optional cassette or 8-track tape deck. With the cassette unit you can record baby's first "da-da" . . . Aunt Rose's birthday party . . . or your niece's violin solo. With the 8-track unit, you can enjoy the same tapes you enjoy in your car's tape deck. But in the comfort and safety of your own living room. Both are custom-fitted for any Electrohome stereo console.

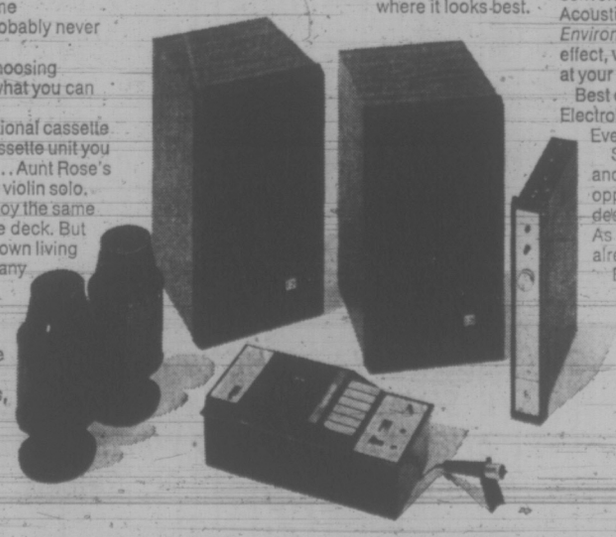
Share the joy.

And why restrict that great Electrohome stereo performance to one room? With a set of Electrohome extension speakers, you can groove to the Rolling Stones in the rec room.

Or Cat Stevens in the Kitchen. Or Brahms in the bedroom. (You devil you!)

There are seven Electrohome extension speaker models in all, each perfectly matched to any Electrohome stereo console.

Of course, Electrohome is still the only stereo that offers Satellite Sound. Which means you place the Electrohome stereo console where it looks best.



And the Satellite speakers where they sound best. Voila! The best of both worlds.

There's even an Electrohome accessory that converts your living room into a concert hall. Acoustically speaking, that is. It's called Environment and when describing its realistic effect, words fail us. Hear a demonstration at your Electrohome dealer.

Best of all, you can add any of these Electrohome stereo accessories any time you wish. Even install them yourself in minutes.

So on top of Electrohome's good looks and great sound, you get to enjoy the opportunity of practically custom-designing your own home stereo system. As if we didn't have enough advantages already.

Electrohome Limited, Kitchener, Ontario.

Estates No Longer Billed

People who die while in mental institutions will no longer have their hospital bills charged to their estates, the NDP government has decided.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said today the government has decided to go back to the original practice of charging patients in mental institutions $1.50 per day, with no extra charges on their estate after death.

The move was contained in cabinet orders approved at Tuesday's meeting of the cabinet, but Cocke did not elaborate on it until this morning.

"What we're doing now is saying the estate of a person who dies in a mental institution is not going to be charged. In other words they are going to be treated the same as if they died in an extended care facility or acute care hospital or whatever," he said.

"This was a very controversial piece of legislation," Cocke said. The section being repealed was brought in by the former Social Credit administration on May 26, 1970.

Asian Immigrant Rush Alert Given Officials

OTTAWA (CP) — Border officials have been warned of a reported rush of illegal East Indian immigrants and Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey said Wednesday their planes may be turned back.

Mackasey made the statement in an interview as he left a cabinet meeting which was discussing whether the Liberal government of Prime Minister Trudeau should attempt to stay in power after Monday's election.

About 200 Indians were reported to have left New Delhi earlier in the day, hoping to enter Canada under existing immigration laws. Travel agents there say many more are preparing to leave, in anticipation that the next government will tighten entry requirements.

Some of the travel agents themselves placed newspaper advertisements warning of possible changes in Canadian immigration law. Now, immigrants can enter Canada as visitors and then apply for landed status.

Mackasey, who was re-elected Monday, said many or all such immigrants rushing here could be turned back if they cannot prove they are coming here strictly as short-term visitors.

"You must remember that nobody can come into Canada unless he has convinced us at the border that he is a bona fide tourist and a bona fide visitor," said the minister.

"This is why we have secondary examination at the border and I suppose if we had any reason to be suspicious of that happening we would be fully justified in turning the plane back.

Mackasey said several planeloads of such illegal immigrants had been rejected by immigration officials over the last few weeks.

Asked whether a specific warning of an immigration rush had been issued to border personnel, Mackasey replied: "Yes."

Mini-Meet For Island Chambers

About 100 delegates are expected to attend the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island mini-convention in Sidney this weekend.

Registration at Sanscha Hall Saturday afternoon will be followed with a welcome to delegates from Sidney Mayor Stan Dear and and a wine and cheese party.

Guest speakers at the Sunday sessions will be Sam Lane of the Olde England Inn in Victoria and RCMP Staff Sgt. J. W. White of Victoria detachment.

On Monday, representatives will tour Butchart Gardens and lunch with the cabinet and deputy ministers in Victoria. A brief evaluation session in Sidney Monday afternoon will conclude the convention.

Smugglers Arrested

DACCA (AP) — More than 1,000 persons have been arrested in the last week for trying to smuggle goods into Bangladesh from India, the army reported today.

Announcing results of a crackdown on smuggling, authorities said those arrested included 294 Indians. Three jute smugglers were shot dead by Bangladesh troops in Rangpur, they added.

Six PAB Workers Given New Jobs

The B.C. Civil Service Commission has found jobs for six ex-employees of the Provincial Alliance of Businessmen and will probably hire at least seven more, Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Wednesday.

Levi, who shortly after the Aug. 30 election, announced the government was abolishing the PAB, said he believes the government has "pretty well lived up to" a promise at that time that the employees would be given jobs, if the commission thought they could fit into the government service.

The PAB was set up by former rehabilitation minister Phil Gaglardi and was described by Levi as a "pork barrel."

The PAB's job was designed to find jobs for people unable to get placement through the federal manpower services.

There were 26 employees of the PAB whom Levi promised consideration for other government jobs.

He said Wednesday that four have jobs in his department and one other is pending. One has a job in another department and seven others are under "active consideration."

Another has returned to university. Nine of the employees were sent letters from the commission saying they could not be placed.

Levi said that a total of 15 had been asked to apply for jobs and he believed that in another month they would all be placed.

Biography of a 'Diminutive Powerhouse'

LONDON (Reuter) — Nancy Astor, a Virginia-born diminutive powerhouse of a woman, became Britain's first woman member of Parliament, and continued to shock and delight her acquaintances well into her 80s.

Christopher Sykes, whose new biography of her, Nancy, The Life of Lady Astor, was published recently, draws on his own acquaintance with this remarkable politician and socially prominent woman and on the copious letters she wrote and received.

Born Nancy Langhore in Danville, Va., in 1879, she was only 18 when she contracted her first, unhappy marriage. It ended in divorce.

To restore the attractive young divorcee's spirits her parents sent her to England. She wrote later: "I loved it. I had this strange feeling of having come home, rather than of having gone abroad."

There was no shortage of suitors for her hand but she chose Waldorf Astor, heir to one of the world's richest men —an American who was naturalized an Englishman in 1899. She married him in 1906, and her father-in-law's principal wedding present to the couple was Cliveden, a Victorian mansion overlooking the River Thames.

'NO TASTE'

On first entering its baroque splendors, Nancy declared "The Astors have no taste" and set about toning down what she regarded as its vulgarities. Cliveden soon became a meeting place for some of the leading writers, poets and politicians of the age.

Nancy Astor, vigorously anti-Roman Catholic from her upbringing, espoused Christian Science, campaigned for a partial prohibition of alcohol, and by natural affinity gravitated to the Conservative party. In 1919, at the age of 40, she was elected a member of Parliament for the naval port of Plymouth, after a heetic campaign during which she showed masterly skill in dealing with hecklers.

One of the most disapproving of her new colleagues when she took her seat in the House of Commons, the first woman ever to do so, was Winston Churchill. Once she asked him pointblank why he was rude to her.

"Because I find a woman's intrusion into the House of Commons as embarrassing as if she burst into my bathroom when I had nothing with which to defend myself, not even a sponge," he replied.

"Winston, you're not handsome enough to have worries of that kind," retorted Lady Astor. Her husband had inherited his father's viscountcy and was then Lord Astor.

Sykes also repeats, as "well authenticated," the oft-told story that these two firebrands had argued ferociously throughout a country weekend at Blenheim Palace. At breakfast, Nancy said: "Winston, if I was married to you, I'd put poison in your coffee."

Churchill replied: "Nancy, if I was married to you, I'd drink it."

The 1930s, years of appeasement of Hitler's Germany, saw an unsavory legend springing up around "The Cliveden Set," a journalist's description of the eminent figures who frequented the Astor's home.

TOURED SHELTERS

They were seen as "The Other Foreign Office," secretly treating with the Nazis. Sykes seeks to explode this myth, and argues that "The Cliveden Set" served as a scapegoat for Britons ashamed of the pre-war soft-line towards Fascism.

The Second World War found Lady Astor not only as an MP for Plymouth but also as its mayor. While German bombers battered the city, she visited the air-raid shelters to rally the citizens. On one occasion morale seemed low and she toured the shelter "not walking but turning cartwheels and somersaults," amid roars of admiration. She was then aged 62.

At the war's end, she finished her own 25 years in the House of Commons, declared herself "an extinct volcano" —and then corrected herself: "I'm not an extinct volcano, I'm a politically suppressed one." She died shortly before her 85th birthday, in 1964.

Sykes sums up her life: "She had enemies among those who did not know her, but few indeed among those who did.

Missing Persons On Ballot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives Hale Boggs of Louisiana and Nick Begich of Alaska will be on the ballots next Tuesday while a search continues for the two whose plane has been missing in Alaska for more than two weeks.

The two Democrats, the House of Representatives majority leader and Alaska's lone congressman, disappeared Oct. 16 while making a campaign trip in a light plane between Anchorage and Juneau. Boggs was helping Begich campaign for a second term.

The two challengers Boggs defeated in the Democratic primary have filed suit in a bid to get their names on the ballot. Boggs is unopposed otherwise.

Alaska Gov. William Egan said if Begich is re-elected Nov. 7 but cannot serve, a special election would be held 60 to 90 days after the vacancy occurs.

Fishing: Smaller Catch, More Cash

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Declining catches but rising values appear to be the trend for the future in Newfoundland's centuries-old fishing industry. Fishermen are landing smaller catches each season but are taking home bigger pay cheques.

Landings for the first eight months this year totalled 467 million pounds worth $25.8 million compared with 706 million pounds worth only $20.8 million for the same period in 1971.

Last year landings totalled 855 million pounds compared with 982 million pounds in 1970. However, the gross landed value of all species in 1971 was up by 1.1 per cent over 1970 reflecting higher prices.

The inshore, spring-to-fall fishery, which once employed 40,000 men, is declining as a fleet of multi-purpose boats of the dragger and longliner types produce the raw material needed by processing plants.

Last year there were only 15,850 men in the inshore fishery, a drop of almost 300 from the previous year's 16,144. And the decline continues.

A joint federal-provincial program of research and development is providing fishermen and processors with information on new species, methods of catching and techniques for preparing products for modern markets.

A few years ago, 90 per cent or more of dragger catches consisted of cod and haddock. The boats now come to port loaded with yellow tails and flounder, ocean perch (redfish), catfish and other species.

A new method for catching herring and mackerel, Scottish ringnet fishing, is proving successful. Imported Japanese nets are producing 10 times the amount of fish the local variety captured, and draggers, converted to mid-water trawling and manned by five to 10 fewer fishermen than carried by the old fishing schooners, are getting bumper catches.

Most of the island's fresh frozen cod fillets are exported to the United States in block for further processing by U.S. plants. Herring, shrimp and lumpfish are exported to Europe in bulk and most of the lobster catch goes live to the U.S.

PRICES INCREASED

There is also renewed hope for the salt codfish economy. Market demand is brisk.

The Canadian Saltfish Corp. recently announced a boost in price to $5 per quintal (100 pounds) from $2 for different grades of light-salted cod.

The prices now range from $42 a quintal for "large choice," the highest grade, down to $13 a quintal for "small west India," the lowest grade.

The corporation also announced that the price for good quality extra large choice heavy salted cod increased by $4 a draught (244 pounds).

Remote Controls for B.C. Budworm

Pity the poor budworm, eating its way through British Columbia forests.

It's got more people spying on it than ever before — small planes, air force jets, and satellite — and things are probably going to get worse.

A group of federal and B.C. cientists meeting this week at the Pacific Forest Research Centre, 506 West Burnside Rd., are examining new remote sensing techniques to keep tabs on the budworm and other problems of B.C. forests.

Two new types of aerial photography — from jets at a height of 35,000 feet, and from an earth resources technology satellite 500 miles up — are being studied by 30 scientists from the agriculture and forestry departments.

High level photography by air force jets was tried this summer in B.C. on an experimental basis, said Dr. John Harris, an entomologist who is an instructor at this week's course, which ends Friday.

Most of Vancouver Island and parts of the rest of B.C. were photographed during the experiment, which was sponsored by the Canadian Centre for Remote Sensing in Ottawa, said Harris.

Many scientists gathered information from the high-level photographs, but Harris' interest was in insects and forest diesases.

"I'm trying to improve the methods in which we appraise for insect pests," he said.

The new high-level photography shows clearly which areas of the forest are insect-infested, and how badly the trees have been damaged.

For example, the black headed budworm is now spread all over Vancouver Island, said Harris. If infestations of this kind become so serious that the trees must be sprayed, the areas that needs spraying can now be pinpointed, he said.

The earth resources technology satellite launched by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in the United States in late July photographed almost all of Canada as it passed over every 18 days.

The satellite uses a television-type camera which sends messages back to the U.S. and, a Canadian detector at Prince Albert, Sask. The federal government has spent almost $10 million setting up machinery to process data from the satellite.

Harris said the satellite photographs were too new to tell what use can be made of them. However, he said, photographs at different levels have many different uses for foresters, land managers and entymologists like himself.

This week's course is likely to be the first of several designed to keep B.C. scientists abreast of technological developments, said Harris.

The course is sponsored by the Forest Management Institute of the Canadian Forest Service and the Pacific Land Inventory.

The Shell Polar Tire

High-traction tread design, 2-ply polyester body plus 2 fiberglass belts for added protection, single whitewall, guaranteed by Shell. Suggested retail prices $21.95* to $33.95 installed.

A dependable snow tire at an excellent price. The new Shell Polar Tire is rugged and dependable. It has been engineered to pass gruelling tests developed by leading auto manufacturers. It exceeds Canadian Government specifications for safety.

For greater strength, quieter ride, and high-speed safety, the tire body is reinforced with two full plies of polyester cord and two fiberglass belts. Polyester is the miracle fibre that eliminates annoying 'cold weather thump'.

Trial Offer: Shell Canada Limited is so confident about the quality of their new Polar Tire that they are offering a 30-day trial period during which you must be completely satisfied or your money will be refunded. Tires must be returned with dated sales slip to the station where originally purchased.

Charge your tires on your Shell Credit Card. Deferred payment plans are available.

ZSA ZSA NAMED IN BANKRUPTCY SUIT

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Actress Zsa Zsa Gabor was named Tuesday in a $2.5-million suit filed in Manhattan federal court in connection with the bankruptcy of Zsa Zsa Ltd., a cosmetics concern.

The suit was brought by New York lawyer Jacob Oliner, a trustee of the bankrupt firm, against Miss Gabor, officers of McBride's Industries Inc., and others.

The complaint charges that the defendants conspired from May 27, 1971, "to divert and appropriate the good will trademark, customer relations, service contracts and other intangible assets of Zsa Zsa Ltd."

The suit also charges that the defendants fraudulently formed Zsa Zsa International Inc. and unlawfully diverted the defunct firm's assets among themselves.

COLLEGE PREFERRED . . .

VANCOUVER (CP) — Results of a University of B.C. survey released Wednesday show that almost all students who graduated from B.C. high schools last spring plan — sooner or later — to pursue a higher education.

The province-wide survey by UBC educational researcher Dr. John Dennison found that 91 per cent of 19,000 students polled said they would eventually enroll in post-secondary studies.

About 43 per cent said they would enroll almost immediately after graduation in June while the remainder planned to delay further studies by a year or more in order to first work or travel.

Dr. Dennison said he considers the findings statistically reliable since 70 per cent of the total grade 12 population in the province completed the survey.

One-quarter of the students said they would enroll in one of the province's four universities while 15 per cent would choose vocational training and 11 per cent would select technical training. The remaining 10 per cent would enroll in private colleges or else take their education in institutions ouside B.C.

. . . BUT DOES IT PAY?

TORONTO (CP) — An official of Statistics Canada said Wednesday that university enrolment is not increasing because students do not feel a degree pays off.

Dr. Miles Wisenthal, director of the statistical education division, told the annual meeting of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada:

"They feel the investment of time and money . . . would not produce the kind of economic payoff which they think university education should provide."

He said a recent telephone survey showed Canada's university population increased by one-half percentage point this year. Dropouts will likely reduce the growth rate to zero by Dec. 1.

Wisenthal said alienation and disaffection with universities accounted for only a small number of students who did not enrol as predicted last fall.

Reasons most often given for not attending university were economic factors and disillusionment with higher education.

Surveys have also found:

—Enrolment dropoff is greatest in families where there already is a low level of education.

—Money is a problem for 20 per cent of he students.

—Arts and sciences courses are hardest hit while most professional courses are holding their own and medicine and law faculties are still unable to accommodate all qualified applicants.

—One quarter of students who did not show up for university as expected were taking some kind of course—either part-time or in a college.

Wisenthal said brief telephone survey of community colleges this fall indicated there was no significant shift of students to colleges from universities.

Doctors Walk Out Demanding More Pay

MONTREAL (CP) — The staff of 32 doctors at the Albert Prevost Psychiatric Institute in the north end of the city handed in its resignation Wednesday, the day arbitration between the psychiatrists and the administration was to start.

The doctors are remaining on the job to treat the hospital's 92 patients, spokesman Pierre Lefebvre said at a news conference.

"We will attend the arbitration but it is only a longterm solution," Lefebvre said. We need immediate action. This is our last resort."

Hospital administrator Jean-Louis Bourret said in an interview Wednesday "admissions will be restricted until we organize ourselves and get new doctors but by no means will the hospital be closed."

The doctors and administration have been involved in a dispute over their respective fields of jurisdiction since the public service strike in April when hospital workers walked off the job for 11 days.

Putting Woman 'In Her Place'

EDMONTON (CP) — A philosophy of womanhood that emphasizes a supportive rather than a competitive relationship with men as a means of achieving happiness in marriage is being offered through a course called Fascinating Womanhood.

Based on the book of the same name by Californian Helen B. Andelin, the course has been offered privately and through the YWCA in Edmonton several times in the last year.

Marjory Hunt, prime organizer of the Edmonton project, says the course has been widely available in the United States for several years and there are thousands of adherents to the philosophy.

Mrs. Hunt, 30, married for eight years and mother of two, said she took the course for self improvement three years ago and it helped open doors to understanding her role as a woman.

Fulfilling Role

"The course helps a woman gain fulfillment in her role as a woman — wife, mother and homemaker," she said in an interview.

"Men and women are like a look and a key — they are of equal worth but fulfill a different purpose."

The course is based on a fill-in-the-blanks workbook of eight lessons liberally sprinkled with quotations from women whose marriages have been helped by the course.

The workbook expresses Fascinating Womanhood philosophies such as:

● "Men must take their place in the world of men.

They have battles to win, mountains to climb, and rivers to cross. Let him live his life as his duties and desires demand."

● "Although a woman should always place her husband No. 1 on her life, a man cannot always do this. Often his work and responsibility away from home must come first."

● "Man has an innermost need to be the leader. It is his right by divine commandment and also by logic. It is unfeminine for a woman to usurp the leadership position."

● "Let him be the breadwinner. Work only in compelling emergencies. Do your part by being feminine, living your feminine role, and helping him to feel superior in his masculine role."

● "Yield consistently and unreservedly, whether you agree with him or not. Otherwise, his position of leadership means nothing to him."

● "We have a challenge before us in undoing mistakes in the past. The battle for equality of the sexes has led us into confusion and unhappiness and needs to end for a greater effort — that of restoring womanhood ot its rightful position."

Mrs. Hunt said: "The course doesn't pretend to save marriages, but it has helped provide women with a pattern for happines."

"I'm not against women's liberation but think many women's lib types are going about it in the wrong way — trying to compete with men instead of fulfilling themselves as women."

The Fascinating Womanhood course was offered last summer at the Edmonton YWCA at the same time as a course called Second Look which offers women professional counselling and self-analysis to help them decide on their interests outside the home.

Reinforce Values

"People seem to take courses that reinforce their own values. Most of the FW group probably had already decided to stay at hom and not work, while those taking the Second Look course had probably already decided to seek alternative activities."

She said the fact that both types of courses designed specifically for women have had such good response shows that many women are unhappy and are seeking help through courses to find some kind of fulfillment.

Schools 'Add to Stress'

OTTAWA (CP) — Schools may be guilty of adding to the stresses of life rather than teaching students to face them, Norman Goble, secretary-general of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, said this week.

In the closing address at a two-day national conference on school health, Mr. Goble said: "There is room for immediate improvement in many schools in the reduction of unnecessary stress, to make them less detrimental to the physical, emotional and mental health of the student."

The Ottawa educationist said he was not referring only to the physical environment of the school, although the "old familiar questions" about lighting, ventilation and "the dietary influence of the soft drink machine" also are important.

"But what we have not given nearly enough thought to is the nature of the school as an over-all daily environment during 12 of the most important years of life."

During the final sessions delegates said the school must be concerned with physical and emotional development of the child "from Grades kindergareten to 13" and also with delivery of care through such programs as immunization.

"There's no reason these couldn't be extended to dental and visual services, too," said Mr. Goble. However, he added, these generally are considered a family responsibility.

Health Food Claims Shot Down by Expert

VANCOUVER (CP) — So-called "health foods" are neither safer nor more nutritious than any other food, says the president of the Canadian Institute of Food Science and Technology.

Dr. James F. Richards, an associate professor of food science at the University of British Columbia, said in an interview this week that too often people are scared away from the ordinary food on market shelves by misinformation spread by food faddists.

"If people want to eat organic food, that's fine," said Dr. Richards. "But I'm against those who delude others into believing organic food is either safer or nutritionally superior to the food you buy at your local store. It is not the case. My personal view is that toxicity of organic health foods is probably higher and therefore less safe."

Dr. Richards said the time has come for professionals in the food sciences to give the facts on a regular basis. He said "there's a tremendous pool of information" among such organizations as his own institute, and the Canadian nutrionists, dieticians, and health science bodies, as well as those in agriculture.

He said the lack of general knowledge that any food can create a health risk has caused many consumers "to over-react" when confronted with health food arguments.

"Some people like to make statements that additives in commercial food are poisonous. Well, flourides are poison. Most chemicals are if used wrongly. Unfortunately, the consumer is rarely in a position to get into the (scientific) details of this. So the only thing we can do is lay the facts on the line."

Dr. Richards said the amount of additives in foods is being continually reviewed in Canada by the health protection branch of the Department of Health and Welfare. "They don't permit any additives unless they have some significant advantage to the consumer."

Tooth Reimplanted

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A leading dentist says there's something you can do if your child knocks out a tooth — find it fast.

"If you get the child and the tooth to the dentist within half an hour, there's a good chance it can be reimplanted," he told newsmen at the society meeting.

"Tell the dentist it's an emergency," added Dr. Roy L. Lindahl, who is succeeding Posnick. "If the dentist is any good at all, he'll get up in the middle of the night and meet you at the office."

Covered In Quilts

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY
Special to The Times

—304 quilts, neatly folded, stacked on the floor in the dining room of a Riverside Drive apartment in New York City. Six more hang on the walls.

—38 quilts mounted in a museum in Amsterdam. The exhibit began at the Whitney museum in New York, moved on to the Louvre in Paris and a museum in Lausanne and has been requested by other European museums.

—39 more quilts on show in the Renwick gallery in Washington. After the show closes, Jan. 7, it will tour the United States under the auspices of the Smithsonian travelling exhibition service. After that "I'm pricing warehouse space," Holstein said.

Gail van der Hoof and Jonathan Holstein are fast becoming the Mellons of quilt collecting. They do it for the love of the art. They collect no fee from museums for the exhibition of their collection.

Holstein, a writer by profession, is now finishing a book about quilts. "But the exhibitions have really been a drain, though fun," he said. They answer 10 or 15 letters a seek from people who have heard of their collection and who want to sell them quilts, buy their quilts, or tell them about the letter wriers' closets and closets of quilts.

Gail van der Hoof, a craftsman who specializes in fabric crafts, spends much of her day repairing and restoring the collection. They talk now about beginning a U.S. tour of the South and Appalachia to add to their collection, now limited to pieced quilts from New England, New York, Colorado and points between.

"It all began four years ago," Holstein said, "when Gail and I were in an antique shop. Up until then, we'd both been interested in American crafts and antiques, in general. That day, poking around, we found three quilts thrown on the floor in the back of an antique shop.

"I was struck by the great resemblance to modern art. It really shook me. Here were these great abstract designs, stitched by simple, unpretentious women who never realized they were creating great art. The quilt designs were just as sophisticated as anything easel artists did much later, thinking they were onto something new.

"Quilts, of course, had always been valued for their fine seams and often for the sentimental value of having been made by this grandmother or that friend. But what Gail and I saw — that no one had paid much attention to before — was that quilts should be valued for their artistic creativity.

"The idea of quilts as art objects, not as craftwork, is the thing that's made museums anxious to show the collection. It's a whole new way of looking at the folk art.

"We never could explain to the dealers we bought from that we looked at quilts as art," Holstein said. "They usually said, as we walked out with our arms full of $1 quilts 'well, you folks won't be cold this winter.'

"We were in one gallery which specializes in primitive American art, when the owner was unpacking wooden Indians neatly padded with quilts for shipping.

"We've rescued some quilts used as paint drop cloths. We've bought others out from under dealers who spread them on the grass at flea markets to hold their wares.

"We found six quilts in a trunk, all made by the same hand in Pennsylvania in the 1860s.

Gail van der Hoof is the half of the team engaged in the restoration of the quilts. 'I don't try to restore them to new condition," she said. "Where the material actually gone, I patch with old fabric I've saved.

"For some reason brown patches seem to go first. There seems to have been something in that brown dye which actually attacked the cloth.

"We've found Pennsylvania quilts are in the best condition. Lots of times they don't seem to be used at all — perhaps because the climate was more temperate there than in New England."

'Hip' Granola Begins to Feel The Crunch

By MICHAEL KERNAN
Special to the Times

Life is unfair, nothing is as good as it used to be, and the sky if falling. We already knew that. But now somebody is attacking crunchy granola.

Tests show that the popular health food, a staple in the hip diet, has no more nutritive value than straight breakfast cereals such as Cheerios, Kix and Wheaties. Furthermore, granola has over five times as many calories, by volume.

It can run as high as 500 calories per cup.

The findings of Helen Black, a home economist for the consumers cooperative of Berkeley, Calif., were published this summer in Dr. Eugene Schoenfeld's hip newspaper column, "Dr. Hip Pocrates." The reaction was instant and irate.

"I'm still getting mail," Dr. Schoenfeld reported from his Stinson Beach, Calif., home. "I also get lots of homemade granola in the envelopes. I even get it from manufacturers. One outift sent me 16 pounds of the stuff.

Granola, homemade or manufactured, basically consists of rolled oats, brown sugar or honey, oils, nuts or seeds, wheat germ and salt. It is heavy, which is why a bowlful has so many more calories than the flimsy flakes. But even ounce for ounce it has considerably more calories than the Battle Creek products. An ounce of granola, for instance, has 130 calories. Cheerios and Kix weigh in at 112 calories per ounce, and Wheaties at 104.

Risk 'Granola Belly'

"Look on the package," said Dr. Schoenfeld. "The ingredients are listed with the mostest first, and the first three ingredients are oats or wheat, sugar of honey, and then oil, which is usually a vegetable oil. People out here in the west are getting a thing called granola belly, which is something like a beer belly.

The usual defense by granola fans is that the standard cereals use artificial vitamins, while granola's vitamins are natural.

"It may seem logical that natural vitamins and nutrients are better than artificially added ones," he said, "but the fact is the body does't make this distinction."

As Dr. Jean Mayer, Harvard professor of nutrition, put it, "a vitamin is a vitamin is a vitamin, no matter what raw material it comes from. You can get vitamin C from orange juice or rose hip jelly, it doesn't matter which." There is no point in overdosing yourself with vitamins either, the professor noted, because the body simply passes on what it doesn't need.

Meanwhile, granola has turned into a $5-million-a-year business. Large cookie companies are interested. The latest entry is Sun Country granola, by International Multifoods Corp. which makes Kretschmer wheat germ. The firm's market researchers found that granola cereal shipments to California have risen 123 per cent in the last six months and that in San Francisco granola outsells any other single brand.

Granola is not exactly a new product, according to the Southwestern Miller, one of those trade papers that is so packed with solid, satisfying, succulent facts that it makes even the most pompous general circulation newspaper read like some frothy digest.

In the 1880s somebody came up with "granula," a stone-ground wheat produced along the lines of Dr. Sylvester Graham's famous cracker — and even today granola tastes a bit like crumbled Graham crackers. A few years later a mixture of oatmeal and cornmeal, baked into biscuits and ground up, was christened "granola."

Cereal Inventor Kellogg

By 1964 Kellogg's descendants, of course, were deep into corn flakes (1904) and such permutations as Quangeroos, Cap'n Crunch and Count Choculas. But that year, a Nashville baker, Layton Gentry, called crunchy granola.

Almost immediately he sold the formula for $3,000 to a local factory and before he knew it the stuff was grossing $1 million a year. Gentry moved to Hollister, Calif., and bought back the western rights to the cereal. Today he turns out 40,000 pounds a month, but no more, because he doesn't like big business.

Psychologist Replaces Priest as Consoler

For the past 12 years, Dr. Colin Murray Parkes of London's' Tavistock Clinic has made a special study of human bereavement. His recent book, Bereavement — Studies in Adult Life, is reviewed here by John Rowan Wilson, a doctor and well-known medical journalist.

By JOHN ROWAN WILSON
Special to the Times

LONDON — Blessed are they that mourn, says the Bible, for they shall be comforted.

But how?

With the decline of religion, the mechanisms of comfort are being rapidly dismantled. We can no longer console ourselves with the thought that our loved ones, though lost to us, are now in a far better place than the world they have left.

The religious ceremonies that dignified and beautified death are being progressively abandoned in favour of a rapid disposal of the corpse in the neatest and most hygienic way possible. By contrast with our ancestors, we rarely discuss death: as a social phenomenon it hardly seems to exist. Only the mourners obstinately remain.

As always, when the priest moves out, the psychiatrist moves in. Grief has nowadays become an increasingly popular subject for psychological analysis.

Some of Dr. Colin Murray Parkes's conclusions about grief are well known to all of us from experience.

It is no surprise to hear that widows frequently visit the doctor, complaining of anxiety and depression during the first year of widowhood.

It is not even very startling to hear that a great many symptoms known to be of psychological origin, such as headaches, dizziness, and skin rashes, are more common at such times of emotional stress.

Bereaved people smoke and drink more, they have difficulty in making decisions. For some reason which has not been clearly explained, they also have an increased liability to coronary thrombosis.

Diagnosis is straightforward: it is in treatment that the problem lies.

Dr. Parkes rightly emphasises that to deal helpfully and sympathetically with bereavement, it is essential to have some understanding of the psychological aspects of the condition.

Many bereaved people have secret fears that they find it hard to put into words, such as that they are going mad or in danger of committing suicide. It is of some help to know that insanity is very rare in bereavement — the mind does not easily break down as a consequence of grief. Suicide, on the other hand, is always a possibility in a person of depressive disposition.

The best way of approaching this is to talk about it. The simple question "Has if been so bad that you have thought of killing yourself?" is more likely to save a life than to take one.

The most important question of all in regard to dealing with bereavement is whether to restrain grief or to act it out. The practice in traditional societies has always been to indulge in elaborate ceremonies and demonstrations of a highly formal nature, such as protracted funeral obsequies, memorial services, and wakes.

Relatives dress in mourning garments to call public attention to their plight. Death is a highly significant cultural event. The ceremonies surrounding it help to hold the family together and to support individuals within the family group.

In the more complex urban societies of the 20th century the tendency is to treat death as a private problem of a few close relatives, or even of the widow alone.

Dr. Parkes claims that this change has been damaging psychologically to many bereaved people, who need support both from the family itself and from the traditional customs of the mourning period. The experience of grief is, as he sees it, part of living which should not be put away and concealed behind a facade of "proper control."

As regards the clergyman or priest, the doctor or the social worker, their main contribution towards consolation of the bereaved person lies in sympathy and undertsanding.

While they cannot relieve the grief itself, they can, by a balanced attitude and by placing the bereavement in its context with the other inevitable events of life, make it easier to bear.

They can also try to replace some of the support which the accident of death has taken away. What is required here varies with the individual.

One almost suicidal widow who went without success to several general practitioners and a very understanding psychiatrist was eventually cured of her depression by a domineering Catholic priest who berated her for her selfishness.

The priest told her to look after the family instead of thinking about her own troubles. Explaining the priest's influence over her she said, "He reminded me of Edward (her late husband). He used to shout at me just like that."

'Learn to Love Him' Big Risk

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old girl and everyone tells me I have a beautiful face, but I am very, very heavy, and I've been this way all my life. I've tried every kind of diet imaginable, but have never lost more than 20 pounds, which I always put right back on, so I've decided to give up dieting.

I've never dated much, but I didn't let it make me miserable. I have a good bookkeeping job, read a lot and do beautiful needlework.

My problem: I am going with a 54-year-old man who wants to marry me. Before you say he is too old for me, please finish this. He's a widower with married children who think I'm the greatest. He loves me and says he likes me just the way I am. He would be a good provider, and I wouldn't have to work, but he says I could if I wanted to. We like the same things (we're both homebodies) and I know we could be happy together.

My parents are against him because he's older than my father. Abby, if being treated well can make a girl love a man, I know I could learn to love him. We have never been intimate. (He hasn't even tried.)

Should I marry him? Who else would want a girl who is 100 pounds overweight? Undecided

DEAR UNDECIDED: A girl who marries a man, hoping to "learn to love him" is risking a lot. That is not to say that only couples who are wildly in love can be happy. (Many are.) But your reason for wanting a 54-year-old man at age 19. ("who else would want me?") is a weak one. I vote with your parents. Don't rush into marriage. I urge you to make a sincere effort to lose that weight — then consider marriage. You have a lot to lose — but everything to gain.

This second honeymoon will not only make you better parents, but will presumably make your children better children in that they will quit taking you for granted and realize that, unless they shape up, you might very well pack up someday and not return until they are 21.

The first problem arises in deciding where to "get away" to. Unless you have taken pains to cultivate all those common interests that drew you together in the first place, you may discover that after 15 years you have wildly divergent ideas on what constitutes a good time.

Basically, I like to be where it's at; my husband likes to be where it isn't. While I envision a kidney-shaped swimming pool, cocktails on the terrace, and dressing for dinner, he looks forward to catching a 20-pound northern pike and not shaving for a week.

The second problem arises in finding someone to stay with the children while you are away. Grandma would be delighted. She can afford to be delighted: she lives 700 miles away. If you must hire a sitter, you'll find that references are absolutely essential. I mean, you can't expect sitters to stay with just anybody. Forge them if necessary.

But the basic problem of getting away from the children is that you never really do. Even though we found a place to go, hired a semi-reliable sitter, and signed a pact in blood that we wouldn't mention the children's names for the next 72 hours, I spent the entire first day tucking cocktail stirrers, shiny rocks, and baby frogs into my purse.

"I wish that you would forget the kids just once," my husband said at dinner that night.

"Me? I haven't thought about them at all."

"Then why did you cut up all my meat for me?"

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Friday, November 3, 1972

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on partnership, marriage, the way you present ideas to public. Permit others to express themselves. Your role now should be that of keen observer. Direct action would be premature. Ask and learn.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Practical issues dominate. Work procedures are emphasized. You will have more responsibility. Rewards also will be greater. Key now is to find what it is you are seeking. Older individual will offer benefit of experience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect now coincides with change, emotional response, intensified relationships. Creativity surges to fore. There is opportunity for greater self-expression. Aries is in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New element could enter domestic area. You build for security by taking chance on your own abilities Not wise now to follow crowd. Imprint your style. Individuality becomes your ally. Act accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family member may have errands which are time-consuming. Maintain sense of humor. Bickering will accomplish nothing. Hunch could pay dividends. Accent is on movement, short trips, special activity connected with relatives.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be more aware of budget, bank account, earning capacity. Study alternatives. You are not stuck with one method, procedure. Be flexible and versatile. Potential is greater than you might imagine.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Lunar cycle coincides with time when you can successfully take initiative. Stress independence of thought, action. Member of opposite sex pays meaningful compliment. Personality shines. You are called on to make special appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis is on illusion, situation that is not quite out in open. Be discreet. Perceive meanings that may be obscured by semantics. If you don't know, ask. Answers are obtainable if you are dedicated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent is on social activity which leads to profitable situation. Family member can aid. Proper setting, atmosphere could bring about important reunion. Low-key approach should be advocated. Win rather than force your way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Career, ambitions, general standing in community — these are emphasized. Check with one in authority. Don't be sidetracked by one who is enamored with red tape. Go directly to source.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Decision concerning future seems imperative. Key is to take long-range view. Avoid rushing. Be aware of security. Your own philosophy is important. Know it and develop yourself as a whole person. Message will become increasingly clear.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There is an alternative. Know it and don't succumb to feeling of defeat. Finish project. Reach new understanding with one close to you. Money problem need not represent dilemma. Key now is cooperation.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have fine sense of humor. You also exhibit tendency to scatter your efforts. You have natural ability to entertain. You intrigue with what appears to be an offhand manner. In actuality, you usually know where you want to go even if you don't always choose direct routt. Two months ago an adjustment in home area probably occurred.

Maidens Get Top Prices, and a Bird

A government report released Tuesday said a woman marrying for the first time in the remote Jimi Valley of the Papua District is worth no more than $240 in cash, five pigs and one cassowary (a large flightless bird common to New Guinea and Northern Australia, but rarely seen).

A woman married once before, the valley's governing council said, is worth no more than $30, two pigs and a cassowary.

And for women married more than once, the councilmen issued an ungentlemanly judgment—"such women are of no commercial value."

When you have taken dozens and dozens of color slides on a vacation trip or a festive occasion, you will in due course want to show the best ones to your friends and relatives.

After you have chosen those worth showing, arrange them in logical order. But remember, even if your pictures are excellent, most people's attention span for slide shows is not more than one hour.

The 12-page pamphlet 'Slide Showmanship presents the know-how of presenting a truly polished slide show. It offers practical advice about editing, setting up your equipment, selecting a screen and eliminating screen glare.

The booklet also suggests you place a rug over the cord from the wall outlet to the projector, so that none of your guests will accidentally trip. For your own convenience, place a floor or table lamp near the projector.

Advice on how to accompany your show with background music or a pre-recorded narration is also included.

You'll enjoy showing off your slides because this will give you the opportunity to relive some happy moments.

Well, I say it's for people who enjoy a good cup of tea and there's nothing 'exclusive' about that. We have a quality product, certainly, so why shouldn't it look that way?

Advertising gimmicks and coupons in the package aren't going to change the taste of the product. We put all our effort into blending a quality tea. It may not be very 'fashionable' but that's our philosophy..."

PISTOL-PACKING PARISH PASTOR

He's the marshal in this North Idaho community of about 250 persons and pastor of its only church. He's also a bona fide deputy in the Kootenai County sheriff's department.

"If anything, I think my taking the job as marshal has brought people together at Harrison," Mr. Mitchell said. "The marshal used to be a laughing matter, but that has now completely changed."

The pastor said he acquired a hand gun in recent weeks but at first questioned whether he would buy any bullets.

Today the gun is loaded and he said he would use it if need be in the line of duty.

Not long after taking over his additional duties here on the east shores of Coeur d'Alene Lake, Mr. Mitchell was advised by the sheriff that two armed men were headed his way in a car. Unarmed, the clergyman halted the auto, disarmed the men and took them into custody.

The arrests came at 10:45 on a Sunday morning and Mr. Mitchell said he had to ask a private citizen, a duck hunter armed with a shotgun, to stand guard over the two prisoners until a patrol car could come from Coeur d'Alene. The pastor hurried to the Baptist Church and delivered his sermon.

No Heart for Marcel

PALO ALTO, Calif. (Reuter) — Frenchman Marcel Champoussin, 39, was told Wednesday he could not have the heart transplant for which he sold his bicycle shop in Marseille.

Champoussin arrived at Stanford Medical Centre last Friday in the hope of getting a transplant performed by a team led by noted surgeon Dr. Norman Shumway.

But Wednesday the Frenchman was told he did not meet the centre's criteria for performing a transplant and he was discharged.

Hospital spokesman Gary Cavalli said transplants are performed only when patients are almost totally incapacitated or where death is imminent.

Champoussin is not in this condition. If his heart condition worsens he may be considered for a transplant at a later date, Cavalli said.

Cavalli said Champoussin intends staying in California for some months to visit friends.

Spillane's Latest Loses To Anti-Smut Committee

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) —"I was banned in Boston in those early days," says Mickey Spillane, who has been spinning tough-guy mystery yarns since I The Jury was first published in 1947.

"My publisher fought that battle and won it. But whoever heard of being banned in Jacksonville?"

Spillane's latest book, The Erection Set, was taken out of circulation at the public library for evaluation when a self-appointed, anti-smut committee complained.

. . . And Ground Opened

KIRBY - IN - ASHFIELD, England—Glynis Stacey pulled a weed from her back garden Wednesday and the ground opened up, revealing a 17-foot deep hole into which she tumbled. She grasped the edge of the hole and managed to climb out.

A spokesman for the National Coal Board said mining had caused the ground to subside.

BUSSANA, Italy — Thieves added insult to injury when they robbed the apartment of the owner of the Giara Restaurant.

First they scooped up $25,500 worth of jewels and paintings. Then they sat down and enjoyed a snack of champange and caviar from the pantry of the restaurant located below the apartment.

MOSCOW — The following explanation by an unidentified Soviet citizen charged with hooliganism was taken from a police blotter and reprinted by the satirical magazine Krokodil:

"I now am absolutely sober and I can say I behaved correctly. The fact that I was barking the whole night at a dog belonging to the chief of the construction site is not a hooligan action. I wanted to attract public attention to the impropriety of keeping dogs on balconies. It is a pity that when I was barking I was drunk and the dog's owner was not at home.

LA JOLLA, Calif. — Dr. Joseph Stokes III, chairman of the department of community medicine at the medical school of the University of California at San Diego, came out Wednesday in support of a state ballot proposition that would legalize the growing and smoking of marijuana.

"The evidence to date would indicate it is a less dangerous drug than alcohol, both the short term and the long term effects," he said in a letter to the San Diego headquarters of the California Marijuana Initiative. "There is little evidence to support the claim . . . that marijuana encourages the use of 'hard drugs' such as heroin."

LOS ANGELES — A Chicago woman has sued entertainer Flip Wilson saying he fathered her child.

Mabel Robinson filed suit asking that Wilson be declared the father of her son Joseph and be required to pay medical expenses and support the child, born in May. A hearing was scheduled for next week.

Fairies Still Hold Sway In Some U.K. Gardens

TORONTO (CP) — An English folklore researcher says belief in fairies is still very much alive in Britain.

Dr. Katharine Briggs, said in an interview Wednesday that many a good folktale is left unwritten because people still believe and parting with information about the little people is considered unlucky.

"This is a problem a researcher is faced with. Another one is that the people are afraid of being laughed at.

"But quite a lot of educated people have seen fairies. They have given very good accounts of their experience and there is a body of literature on the sightings."

Dr. Briggs, in Toronto for a lecture, said that in Cornwall, many people believe that fairies are the ghosts of druids.

"They were heathens. Not good enough for heaven and not bad enough for hell," she said. "Their powers to roam the earth need replenishing and to keep them from dwindling they possess people."

In some areas of the British Isles, the belief in fairies is so great that no direct designation is ever made. People speak of fairies as "them."

She has written a number of novels based on folktales and compiled a four-volume dictionary of British folktales.

'Nasty Evening' Narrowly Avoided

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

NORTH COWICHAN — One wrong move by a policeman could have resulted in "a nasty evening" when 150 youths gathered in downtown Chemainus Halloween evening, according to RCMP Sgt. Scott Coxen.

"This could not be classed as a riot situation," Coxen, head of the Chemainus detachment told municipal council Wednesday. "But it was a real example of unruly youth in action. It was a situation I would not like to see again in this or any other area."

Coxen said that the youths from Chemainus and Ladysmith roamed the streets and parking lots for two and a half hours in groups of two or three.

"They showed no respect for the businesses of the area or the area in general," he said.

Coxen had told the Times earlier Wednesday that youths had thrown molitov cocktails, set fire to a Goodwill box as well as several garbage cans, lit tires on fire and rolled them down the street, broke windows including one in the police station and moved a railroad tank car across a street.

He stressed that the verbal abuse and pelting of eggs that police officers received "was disgusting."

"I must commend the members of this detachment and those assisting for keeping calm under the circumstances," Coxen said.

He recommended to council that a total ban of all fireworks within the municipality be enforced.

"The use of fireworks seems to have some drawing power over the youths and I feel that this being removed would help the situation," he said.

Coxen also suggested that some community-sponsored program be offered next year.

Upon the recommendation of Ald. Tom Burge, council agreed to write a letter of appreciation to the Chemainus volunteer fire department, and other assisting departments, who were kept busy all Halloween evening fighting a major fire at Nanoose Forest Products Ltd. and other fires set by the youths.

Council was told that the department was called out five times during the evening and many members never did get to bed.

GUN COLLECTORS HOLD SHOW HERE

Gun collectors from across Canada will gather at the Empress Hotel this weekend for the 10th annual Gun Show sponsored by the Vancouver Island Arms Collectors Association.

Theme of the show will be public appreciation of the historical role of weapons in building Canada and firearms safety through increased public knowledge.

Exhibitions competing for awards will be joined by displays from across Canada including the fish and wildlife branch of the provincial government, Saanich police department and Smith and Wesson gun manufacturers.

Show hours are from 1 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

$30,500 Budget Increase Approved by N. Cowichan

North Cowichan's revised budget for 1972 is $30,500 more than the budget accepted by council in April, administrator A. Vande Casteyen advised council Wednesday afternoon.

Vande Casteyen, who described the budget as a good one, said the jump is caused by a net increase of $25,742 for general purposes and $4,819 for utilities and special areas.

The new budget, approved by council, totals $5,491,576.

Some of the causes for the increases, which have occurred since the budget was adopted, Vande Casteyen said, are higher than estimated costs for RCMP personnel, increases in wages and cost of materials for public works and tax collections are not as good this year.

Vande Casteyen said there is a decrease of $49,000 for the net cost of welfare to the municipality.

"Most of the saving was the result of a special grant for the 1971-72 period of $24,921 and the reduction over the year of the per capita cost from $1.25 to 96c."

Increases in utilities are mainly due to higher costs relating to the Chemainus water and sewer system and the Southend water system.

Bonanza Days End At Nitinat Lake

NITINAT LAKE (CP) — The spectacular harvest of chum salmon on Nitinat Lake on the southwest coast of Vancouver Island came to an end Wednesday at noon when the waters were closed to commercial fishing.

During the 11-day season on the saltwater lake, fishermen caught more than 1.5 million salmon, with the fish weighing an average of 15 pounds each.

The tremendous catch marked a return to fishing in the area, which had been closed to commercial fishermen for 12 years to build up salmon stocks.

The commercial fishing season began Oct. 22 for what was originally announced as 72 hours, but so many fishermen had such great success that the season was exstended for another eight days.

Saanich Berates Developer For 'Shameful' Apartments

An apartment developer whose bid to rezone Shelbourne Street land was approved in principle by Saanich council Wednesday night, was told his previous efforts on the street were shameful.

"I don't know how you can drive up Shelbourne past the duplexes you have erected. If I were you I would hang my head in shame as I drove past them," said Mayor Hugh Curtis to Alex Yeats, 1598 Rockland, of Victoria Construction Co.

Curtis said Yeats owes it to the municipality to do better on the proposed building, a 45-suite, 3½-storey block on 37,000 square feet covering three lots between Midgard and Earlston. A fourth lot would be developed for surface and underground parking.

"I hope Mr. Yeats brings forward to council plans for a fine-looking apartment," said Ald. Edith Gunning.

The mayor warned that unless council is satisfied, it would not give final reading to the zoning amendment bylaw.

Ald. William Noel said Yeats' previous structure (on the west side of Shelbourne near Derby) leaves "an indelible blot on my mind as to the kind of construction he does in this community."

Curtis endorsed the alderman's remarks.

The advisory planning commission and planning department recommended the application be approved pending presentation of development plans and consolidation of the lots, which extend through to Stamboul. Council further stipulated that adequate road with and drainage be provided on the accesses.

Mrs. David C. Smart, 1610 Earlston, opposed the application because of traffic or parking problems and a threat to plum trees remaining from an orchard on the property.

Yeats said it would be possible to retain a number of trees along Stamboul to screen the parking area. It also was pointed out that trees on the boulevard likely would remain.

Curtis deplored the fact that by virtue of residential development throughout Gordon Head the beauties of the land were diminishing, but he reassured Mrs. Smart that "more and more we will find as the community develops there will be restrictions on parking on streets. Streets are for traffic, not for parking."

Council endorsed a planning department recommendation that a loophole be closed in the zoning bylaw that would have permitted highrise buildings to be erected in a shopping centre zone without approval of council.

An application by Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Underwood, 5420 Fowler, to permit a second dwelling on the 1.9-acre site to accommodate relatives was rejected.

Through their architect the Underwoods indicated the initial structure — an old cottage — would likely be demolished within 10 years, or would no longer be used as a dwelling.

"If we are going to be consistent we can't put a time limit on rezoning," Ald. Gunning noted.

Other applicants had been turned down because of a policy against subdivisions of parcels less than five acres in size.

Ald. Alan Newberry said public hearings were called because each application should be judged on its merits, which was the kind of consistency he had in mind.

Sun Keeps Shining In Toronto

TORONTO (CP) Despite cloudy intervals and scattered showers, The Sun celebrated its first birthday Wednesday.

The tabloid successor of the Toronto Telegram published a cheerful 28-page supplement in its anniversary issue, recalling the almost universal pessimism as to its prospects of survival when the first edition appeared two days after The Telegram ceased publication.

"Only a fool would have predicted we'd last," executive editor Peter Worthington wrote in an article recalling the first frantic days of the newspaper's life. "All 70 of us originals, then, must have been fools because few of us had doubts."

Aiming at a circulation of 50,000 The Sun produced 75,000 copies of its first issue, which quickly beoame a collector's item. The Sun now reports and average daily circulation of 80,000.

Saanich Winter Works Sets $800,000 Target

Municipal winter works projects worth $809,429 are being proposed to the federal government by Saanich under the 1972-73 local initiatives program announced in Ottawa last month.

Under the cost-sharing plan Saanich would be responsible for $562,417 of the bill, which requires that a proportion of new jobs be created over the life of the program.

Mayor Hugh Curtis, noting the funds are allocated on a first-come, first-served basis, said he hoped Saanich would be among the first applicants.

About four-fifths of the proposed undertakings, or $673,479 of the total, are public works including improvements to sidewalks and traffic flow, sewer cleaning, storm drain and watercourse improvements, and two-inch water main replacement.

The remainder, totalling $135,950, consist of parks and beach access improvement.

Employment of about 77 men including regular municipal staff would be provided if the program is approved. It would last from December through May.

Largest item in the proposal is $286,732 for two-inch water main replacement, a continuing program given priority by Saanich in recent years which has resulted in larger diameter mains for all but 10 miles of the distribution system. The winter works plan would see the two-inch system reduced to five miles.

Improvements to streets such as removal of outcrops and better traffic aids along with sidewalk construction would account for $150,960 and the surface drainage program for $122,230.

Sewer cleaning would cost $42,539 and Colquitz River-Swan Creek waterway improvements $71,018.

Under the parks portion there would be initial work done in Knockan Hill Park, near Trans-Canada Highway, to make trails and improve access off Burnside or Wilkinson. This is 11.4 acres of rural land at present without any improvements.

Others that would have trail and general work done would be Braefoot, Gorge, Lambrick, Gyro, Lakeside (Prospect Lake), Playfair, Rainbow, Prospect Lake Park, Seymour and Tillicum, for a total $62,950.

Beach access at Margaret Bay and drainage improvements elsewhere would cost $27,000, about half for drainage.

Building construction and general improvements worth $46,000 would be done at Rudd, Horner, Lambrick and Tillicum, with a disposal field installed at Prospect Lake Park and a footbridge at Tillicum. A bowling green base would be included at Lambrick, along with improvements to the former barn there.

Curtis said the Saanich share of the projects outlined would be budgetted largely for 1973 out of general revenue.

MDs CRITICIZED FOR DRUG VIEWS

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Members of the medical profession were criticized Wednesday for inability to help young drug abusers and reluctance to allow others to help.

Mrs. Owen Salsbury told the Ontario Medical Association's hearing into the medical profession that doctors are inadequate and poorly trained to help drug abusers.

Mrs. Salsbury, representing a Kingston group called Parents of Drug Abusers, said some doctors view drug abuse as a medical problem, others as a behavioral problem.

The profession must decide which view is correct, she said. If drug abuse is a medical problem, doctors should be better trained to deal with it. If it is a behavioral problem, they should allow others to handle it except in medical emergencies.

WANTS HELP CENTRES

Mrs. Salisbury suggested establishment of drug detoxification centres to assist drug abusers, since many doctors feel hospital emergency wards are not the place for drug abuse cases.

Dr. D. C. Symington, a Queen's University professor, told the hearing that doctors must become more involved in the social, psychological, vocational and economic consequences of illness and disability.

Rehabilitation of patients, which allows patients to remain in their homes, can save thousands of dollars, he said. Rehabilitation of a car accident victim in her home saved $50,000 in hospital costs over four years.

Although hospital costs would be reduced by rehabilitation, said Dr. Symington, costs will increase to the community and social services ministry.

A further problem, he said, is the shortage of rehabilitation specialists. An Ontario Medical Association survey two years ago found 28 vacancies for these physicians and only about five medical graduates training in the field. Doctors in rehabilitation medicine received the lowest incomes.

Province Prefers Subdivision to Historical Park

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. (CP) — The 500-acre island here which once served as the vacation retreat of Sir William Cornelius Van Horne, builder of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been sold to an American who plans to subdivide it into building lots.

Norman Langdon, 39, who said he came to neighboring Maine penniless in 1964, purchased historic Minister's Island for $600,000 this year after the New Brunswick government turned down a suggestion it be made into a park.

The island has long been a favorite tourist spot because it can be reached by car only at low tide when "the road on the ocean floor" appears but it is expected it will be closed to the public once it has been sold for private homes.

Mr. Langdon said it was unlikely he would be able to sell lots on the island if he planned to allow the public access to the old Van Horne home still standing near the island's southern tip.

He already has invested some money to repair the 28-room house, complete with 11 fireplaces. The estate also boasts stables, barns and a groundskeeper's cottage.

ARRANGED SALE

The island was still in the hands of Sir William's descendants until 1960 when his granddaughter lost interest in it.

The then Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Restigouche arranged the sale of the island to a group of Ohio businessmen incorporated as the Van Horne Island Club.

The original sale price was $37,000 but by the time the mortgage was arranged in 1963, the price had jumped to $50,000, still a bargain.

The Cleveland group put in more roads and even built an airstrip but their dream of a resort island slowly faded and the island came back on the market.

"When I found out it was for sale again, I went to Ottawa 15 months ago and Ottawa said it would be delighted to see Minister's Island as a park," he said. "They were willing to put up 75 per cent of the purchase price. But I went to see Premier Hatfield in the spring and summer of 1971 and his attitude was no. It would only involve $100,000 on the province's part. But he wouldn't hear tell of it."

Dr. Noel Tibbo, deputy-mayor of St. Andrews and assistant director of the federal fisheries board research station here, envisaged a major aquarium on the island, related to the work at the research station.

He even went as far as to draft a plan for a marine aquarium-national park for Minister's Island.

"It wouldn't have cost tens of thousands," he said. "It would have been millions. But what better place than here, close to the border, in the traffic flow?"

Even the new owner, Mr. Langdon, wonders why the provincial government didn't seize the opportunity to purchase the island.

"Sure, the province should have bought the place and turned the whole island into a monument for the CPR and Van Horne."

Museum Lay-Offs Feared

Provincial Museum director Bristol Foster said Wednesday he hopes Ottawa continues the federal Local Initiative program.

Foster said 35 persons are working in various departments of the museum under the program.

"It would be tragic to lay off these people, especially around Christmas," he said.

The program ends Nov. 30 but the Liberal government prior to Monday's election said it would continue.

Foster said most of the people employed at the museum are under 30.

"They are doing useful work on behalf of education," he said. "They are also being trained in various fields of endeavor, such as taxidermy teaching, cataloguing and secretarial work."

'Decency' Hampers McGovern

By ROD CURRIE

CHICAGO (CP) — George McGovern is decent. Nobody denies it.

He's decent to the point that his decency ironically is becoming a political liability.

It's this decency that leads him to the dangerous ground of specifics in campaign promises, despite the urging of good friends toward the political safety of traditional generalities.

It's a decency that makes him shun the accepted political hoopla, the back-slapping and arm-waving.

He's a political oddity who may slip into a crowded hotel lobby where hundreds have been waiting for hours for a glimpse of him and shake 50 hands before popping flashbulbs give the tipoff to the others that he has arrived.

At stop after stop as he stumps the United States in an uphill pursuit of the presidency in the Nov. 7 elections, the local politician who gets to introduce the Democratic candidate unfailingly hails his decency.

The late Senator Robert Kennedy began it, saying that the man from South Dakota was "the most decent man in the United States Senate." Other Democrats picked it up and even his most ardent political foes never challenge it, although they'll castigate him as a radical, as indecisive, as an idealistic amateur.

LABELLED RADICAL

His decency is becoming a bore and a burden. Sooner or later some newcomer to the plane-load of accompanying press will recall the incisive observation of baseball's Leo Durocher that "nice guys finish last." And that, too, is a bore—everyone's heard it before.

And so, because of McGovern's comprehensive plans for ending the Vietnam war and for increasing welfare, his alliance with the young, women's liberation and other activists, his critics concentrate on the tag "dangerous radical."

He doesn't look the part.

Tall, conservatively dressed, speaking in his slow, one-pitch voice, he appears incredibly square. He's no rabble-rouser. Aides have been quoted as saying they tried to get McGovern to take voice and speech coaching but he turned it down because he didn't want anything artificial or false about his campaigning.

Looking like the Methodist minister he almost became before turning to teaching and then politics, he has sought to live down the image of a one-issue candidate, but the horror of the Vietnam war remains his strongest subject. Only then does his voice take on the fire and verve that sparks a resounding response among his listeners.

"In a peculiar sense," McGovern says, "it was the tragedy of this war that made me the Democratic nominee and I really believe that it is the issue that's going to defeat Nixon."

HAS SIMPLE CURE

McGovern is a populist. His cure for the ills that beset the United States is simple in outline, if specific in detail.

The son of a poor-but-honest, Bible-reading Methodist family, he's advocating a return to the guiding principles upon which America was founded. His minister father took the family to Calgary in 1924, so McGovern's Canadian-born mother could be near her ailing mother, and returned to South Dakota four years later, when George was six.

His plan for immediate withdrawal from the war—which Republicans term "a surrender to communism"—would be followed by a $30 billion cut in defence spending over three years. The Nixon administration says this amounts to a "white-flag policy," but McGovern says he would simply carve away waste fat, leaving enough hard muscle for national defence. He also would close so-called "tax loopholes" that benefit big business.

Ultimately, the savings would be funnelled into an "honorable" welfare scheme, into better education, assistance for veterans, drug rehabilitation schemes, health care and other "crying needs."

This is his text. This is the sermon he delivers, with variations, as he stumps the country on a killing schedule.

Veteran Newsman Dies

TORONTO (CP) — Alex Pringle, a veteran of 43 years in newspaper work and former financial editor of The Canadian Press, has died. He was 91.

A funeral service will be held Thursday in Acton, 35 miles northwest of Toronto, where Pringle lived since his retirement from the national news-gathering agency in 1946.

A native of Frontenac County in southeastern Ontario, Pringle began his newspaper career with the Vancouver Herald.

He later worked on newspapers in Seattle, New Westminster, Saskatoon and Toronto, joining CP in 1921 from the old Toronto Mail and Empire.

Trustees Pick Medical Chiefs

The practice of electing medical chiefs of staff at B.C. hospitals is about to end, according to amendments to regulation under the Hospitals Act.

The amendments were passed at a cabinet meeting Tuesday.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said today the effect is to restore the procedure wherby medical chiefs of staff will be appointed by the board of trustees of a hospital rather than elected by the medical staff.

Cocke said the Social Credit administration had passed an order in council last year changing the appointment procedure to elections.

"That is contrary to the hospital accreditation people and as a matter of fact the College of Physicians was opposed to it. Good sense is opposed to it as well," Cocke said.

He said elections would tend to turn into popularity contests rather than selecting the person best qualified to be medical chief of staff.

Close Park Roads Say Aldermen

Permanent closure of two roads in Beacon Hill Park were recommended today by city council's parks committee.

The two roads are Lovers' Lane, linking the park's two picnic areas, and Parkway, adjacent to the bandshell.

If council endorses the recommendation, portions of the roads will be retained as paths and the remainder turned over to grass.

The closures were suggested by parks director Cliff Bate, following reactions from the public to trial closures and an analysis of questionnaires by the traffic department last August.

Bate said he had received only a handful of complaints from the public to the partial deletion of access roads.

The traffic department report noted, however, that the program now appears to have reached a "saw-off" and if any further closures were contemplated there would be opposition from older, less mobile users of the park.

Heart Treatment Training Urged

In 1971, 798 people died of heart disease in the Greater Victoria area.

Members of the Preserve A Life Society think some of those lives might have been saved by prompt action by trained non-medical citizens.

The society is offering a a three and a half hour pilot course in external heart massage to 15 University of Victoria students Wednesday, Nov. 7 at 7 p.m. in Craigdarroch College.

Lynn Klein, an organizer of the Preserve A Life Society, said he believes this is the first certificate course in external heart massage offered to the public in Canada.

It is in the first three to four minutes after a person's breathing or heart have stopped that resucitation must be started, said Klein.

"Even the best ambulance . . . often takes that long to get to the call," he said. A citizen trained in cardio-pulmonary resusciation could keep the victim going until the ambulance arrives, he said.

The pilot course will be repeated at the university on Nov. 8 and 22, and the society hopes to start a course for the general public in December.

Syllabus of the course has been approved by the Canadian Heart Association, and was presented to the Victoria Medical Society. Both the St. John Ambulance and the Industrial First Aid Attendants' Association have helped with the course, said Klein.

Students are charged $2, but Klein is hoping that a service organization will offer to sponsor the course so the fee could be dropped.

'Nessie' Doubted Despite Photos

Robert Rines, president of the Academy of Applied Science, disclosed Wednesday a series of pictures that he says show a part of a large marine creature inhabiting Scotland's Loch Ness.

The academy, a group of scientists and laymen dedicated to promoting science and technology, presented its findings at the annual Northeast Electronics Research and Engineering meeting.

Rines displayed a series of photos that show a green-brown triangular object, identified as a fin, moving through murky water. He said international authorities who have seen the pictures verify their authenticity, even though no one will hazard to guess the identity of the creature.

"If we are right, and the experts say we are," Rines said, "then there are extremely long animals living in Loch Ness."

The sound waves of the sonar picked up two creatures moving down an underwater ravine toward the camera, Rines said, and showed them to be 20 to 30 feet long. The camera, set 50 feet under water and 150 feet from the sonar equipment, was set to take strobe-light pictures at 15-second intervals and Rines said the fin moved in and out of view in five frames.

Rines said the pictures are of poor quality because of silty water, but photo experts estimate the size of the appendage at about eight to 10 feet long and four to six feet across.

While zoologists have yet to identify the object in the pictures, Rines said one report said the fin structure resembled that of the tail of a newt, a small semi-aquatic lizard.

Swim Team Celebrates Birthday

The Centennial Pool in Colwood and its competitive swim team, the Juan de Fuca Cohoes, are celebrating their fifth birthday Saturday morning.

The day will be marked with a time trial swim meet at the pool starting at 7 a.m., followed by a party in the new Juan de Fuca arena next to the pool.

Twenty-eight young swimmers will be trying to make the qualifying times for the Coho swim team, and regular team members will also be swimming.

The team, under coach and manager Al Aylward, has been Greater Victoria champion for the last three years, and this summer took the championship of Vancouver Island.

In the past five years over 634,000 people have swum in the Centennial Pool and over 12,000 enrolled for lessons.

Recital Slates Dutch Music At St. John's

Music of Dutch composers dating from 1562 to today will be played in the fourth of a series of Wednesday evening recitals Nov. 8 at 8 p.m. in St. John's Church, Quadra and Mason.

Organist Herman Bergink, organist at First United Church and provincial carilloneur, and Gert van der Linden, an oboist now playing with the Naden Band, will perform.

The recital will include works by Sweelinck, van Wilgenburg, Buister and Kee.

Alberta Railway Dream Goes Sour

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government's dream of opening up the province's rich northwest with its own railroad has bogged down in administrative and financial problems involving Canadian National Railways, the legislature was told Wednesday.

Industry minister Fred Peacock made the statement in a report tabled in the legislature, a report which said the Alberta Resources Railway can expect an annual deficit of between $4 million and $5 million until the mid-1970s.

The administrative problem arises from a dispute with the CNR which leases the 282-mile ARR and operates it for the province.

Thirty-seven miles of railbed were washed out by the flooding Smoky River last June and the government and the CNR still are arguing about which party pays a repair bill which has been estimated to be as high as $20 million.

The financial problem is that $126 million was spent on building the ARR, which was completed in January, 1970, and that the annual debt service charge is some $7 million. Earned revenue, mainly from grain and coal shipments, was $690,000 in 1971 and was expected to be about $800,000 this year.

Peacock said the government's stand is that the CNR is liable for the repairs under agreements signed since the original contract in 1965 but "The CNR's position is exactly contrary."

Victims Collect

WINNIPEG (CP) — Attorney-General A. H. Mackling said Wednesday the Manitoba Criminal Injuries Compensation Board apdi $17,734 in the last two months to 12 crime victims.

Nearly $14,000 was paid as part of continuing awards to five victims.

Live Radio Near

WINNIPEG (CP) — President Bob Beaton of the Manitoba legislature press gallery said Wednesday procedures for live radio broadcasting and taping of proceedings of the Manitoba legislature may be ready for the next session of the legislature.

The legislature's rules committee approved the idea in principle some time ago with the provision that any live broadcast not interfere with debate and not involve the expenditure of public funds. Beaton said the broadcasters proposal meets these criteria.

Showdown Ducked

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Medical Association says it wants to begin talks with the provincial government to avoid any chance of a showdown over fee schedules.

Dr. Bryce Weir of Edmonton, a member of the AMA's subcommittee on economics, made the remark during an interview Wednesday. He said the AMA is concerned that the cost of living may keep rising without the Alberta health care insurance commission's benefit schedule keeping pace.

Famed Guide Dies

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Jim Simpson, who guided and explored in the Rocky Mountains before the start of the century, has died at age 95.

Simpson at that time hobnobed with author Jack London, worked as a railway track laborer and was a sealer along the Pacific coast.

He came to the West from Lincolnshire, England, and after serving as a trail cook, packer and trapper became recognized as one of the top guides in the Rockies.

Experiment Works

RED DEER (CP) — A balloon experiment launched by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at Red Deer industrial airport was termed successful Tuesday, after disastrous attempt last Friday.

The silvery dome of Project Skyhook's balloon lifted quietly off the runway Tuesday, pushed by an easterly breeze. Strong winds wrecked last week's attempt to launch the balloon equipped with instruments to sample elements of the upper atmosphere.

In its successful eight-hour flight Tuesday, the helium-filled balloon covered 272 miles at altitudes up to 106,000 feet, and was recovered after landing safely southeast of Cutbank, Mont.

Chairman Named

EDMONTON (CP) — L. C. Green of the University of Alberta has been named head of a Canadian committee which will attempt to draft a convention which he hopes will form the basis of an international treaty dealing with acts of terrorism, such as hijackings and diplomatic kidnappings.

Named to the position by the Canadian Council on International Law, Prof. Green, who teaches political science and international law, will head a group made up of experts in international law and criminology from Canadian universities.

Agent Appointed

REGINA (CP) — A French consular agent for the province of Saskatchewan has been appointed by Roger Stock, French consul in Winnipeg, on the request of Premier Allan Blakeney.

Blakeney said at a news conference Wednesday he is happy with the selection of Rene Rottiers, a professional watchmaker and jeweller who has a "distinguished background of service in French cultural organizations."

Fall Kills Man

GRAND FORKS (CP) — An elderly Grand Forks man, Pete Barisoff, died in hospital Wednesday after falling 30 feet from a CP Rail bridge across the Kettle River. Barisoff was riding a bicycle across the bridge.

River Searched

VALEMOUNT (CP) — Searchers are looking for the body of Donald Edward Johnson, 24, missing and presumed drowned in the Canoe River, about 30 miles northwest of Jasper. He is reported to have been swept away when he and a companion attempted to cross the river Saturday.

Pollen Still Dreams of Mall

Douglas Street's lower section closed to traffic and turned into a big, attractive pedestrian mall?

Or how about the same sort of treatment for the downtown portion of Government?

Such visions of how the city could look in three or more years from now are just that — visions, tentative ideas.

But Mayor Peter Pollen says they are the kinds of ideas which should be given careful thought, study and research if Victoria is to fulfil its potential — and ambition — to become truly a city for people; with downtown focal point where citizens can stroll, shop in traffic-free safety or simply sit on a bench and watch the world go by.

Pollen was an enthusiast of the mall concept before he led a 25-strong party of planners, architects and others on a recent tour of European cities such as Amsterdam, Munich and Norwich.

But seeing what those cities have accomplished has, apparently, reinforced that enthusiasm and made him determined to strive for something similar in Victoria.

Pollen told reporters Wednesday that city council will soon hold an "in-depth discussion" on some of the lessons learned from the European tour, and on possible ways in which these "people-oriented" principles of city planning can be applied locally.

"One of the major things we will be trying to interest the community in is a very bold statement as far as a pedestrian shopping mall is concerned," Pollen said.

"I personnally feel that a North American city like Victoria must respond to the challenge of making its downtown area very attractive to people.

"If we in Victoria are content to continue perpetually accommodating the automobile, with all its attendant noise and pollution, we are going to drive people out of the city to the rather sterile shopping areas on its periphery."

Pollen stressed that the creation of a substantial mall area in a city centre is "a very complex thing," which cannot be undertaken without detailed consideration of many factors including traffic patterns, provision of alternative routes and parking facilities and — of key importance — how public transportation will fit into the scheme.

Without suggesting for a moment any specific proposals, he said two streets which should be given careful consideration for malling are Douglas, from The Bay to Eaton's, and Government, from the Empress to Centennial Square.

Both Pollen and city traffic engineer Dave Campbell consider Government the better choice for a mall as it has the heavier concentration of commercial activity.

However, a report on the feasibility of closing Douglas now being prepared by the planning and traffic departments says this would only be practical by extending Michigan through Beacon Hill Park to accommodate rerouted traffic, in conjunction with other street extensions.

The report is expected to be presented to council in about two weeks.

Pollen said the proposals under consideration will require bold action, but that is the only type of action which will produce an environment worth having.

"If there is community togetherness with some well-defined objectives Victoria could become, without doubt, the most outstanding middle-sized town in North America."

Pollution Warning Puzzles Area Mayors

The intention of the B.C. government to include municipalities, along with industries and individuals, in a major crackdown on polluters has left three Greater Victoria mayors puzzled.

Resources Minister Robert Williams announced Wednesday that, using the courts and "disincentives," the government hopes to curb pollution by municipalities, industries and individuals who are discharging wastes into water, land or the air, using the framework of the Pollution Control Act.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen's reaction is:

"The municipalities are all wholly-owned creatures of the province, so if any action were taken against them it would be against the province."

Regarding industries, Pollen says "stages and target dates" for pollution correction should be set. If these are not met, he adds, certainly action should be taken.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis says, although he tends to favor a move to clear up the environment, he's puzzled at Williams' inclusion of municipalities in the group to be held accountable.

Saying he would have to study Williams' proposals more carefully, Curtis says, "If the minister intends to move strongly against those individuals and organizations that do pollute the atmosphere or environment, then I would find myself in general agreement with him."

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford also stresses that through the Pollution Control Board, itself a provincial body, the government directs actions of the municipalities.

Stressing that the sewage trunk and outfall system is a regional matter, she notes:

"The discharge at Macauley Point is being monitored constantly by an independent observer and will be—either by the University of Victoria or other observers accepted by the PCB.

"If at any time everyone in the region is agreed on this — the monitoring shows a need for treatment, then a treatment plant will be built. Land is available at the land end of the outfall."

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young is all for pollution control — if the municipality can afford it.

"It is very important that costs be worked out," he warns. It's very important that we don't price ourself out of business."

Williams said Wednesday a study will be made by the province's Water Resources Service in order to allocate some value on the assimilative capacity of the environment.

Nominal safe levels will be established. Firms and individuals will be charged for use of that assimilative capacity.

Williams said the establishment of such a system of charges would discourage polluters of the environment.

City 'Magnificent' to Refugees

Senior counsellor John Appleby of Canada Manpower Centre said today Greater Victoria has "responded magnificently" in receiving refugees from Uganda.

The number reaching Victoria will hit 46 this afternoon with the arrival of one more — a single girl — at Pat Bay Airport.

Seven former Ugandans arrived at 3 a.m. today, 16 Tuesday night and 14 Monday night. A total of nine families and three single people are now in Victoria.

"We haven't had to ask for help twice anywhere," said Appleby.

Finding housing is being handled by the Greater Victoria Citizenship Council and the Victoria West Neighborhood Centre. The St. Vincent de Paul Society is acting for Manpower in accepting gifts of furniture and clothing and many East Indians in the community have offered help and are visiting the new arrivals.

Appleby said the citizenship council women are also providing a big helping hand by serving coffee and talking to wives and families "as if they'd known them all their lives" while Manpower is dealing with the husbands.

A job has been found for one of the men to date and there are two or three tentative jobs, he added.

He has no idea how many more Ugandans may be coming to Victoria but expects there will be some more. To date 700 to 800 have arrived in Vancouver.

DRIEST OCTOBER

Victoria had its driest October since 1911 last month.

Only .9 inch of rainfall fell on the city, which was above the 1911 record of .61 inch, but 1.95 inches below the normal rainfall for October.

The Gonzales Observatory registered 186.9 hours of October sunshine, which came close to the 1952 record of 188 hours in October.

There were 46.2 more hours of sun than normal in the 59 years that such records have been kept.

Last month was also the least windy October Victoria has had since 1953. Maximum hourly velocity on 23 days was 17 mph or less, and gale force winds were recorded only one day.

Tonight, however, Victoria is going to get rain and wind, the weatherman predicted.

The remains of a tropical storm will reach here this evening, bringing rain and fairly brisk winds, possibly of gale force.

Friday morning should be cloudy with showers, but the weather should improve in the afternoon as the storm moves northeast.

Rescuer Failed, Inquest Learns

The friend of a man who drowned at Oak Bay Marina Oct. 20 said he "wasn't alarmed at first" when he saw his companion floating in the water below him.

Ronald Palmer, 1330 Hampshire, was questioned by Coroner Edmond St. Jorre, lawyer Cecil Branson and a police officer for three hours Wednesday night at the second session of an inquest into the death of John Philip Vincent, 39, of 1677 Hollywood Crescent.

Vincent drowned after he fell into the water between Palmer's Northern Pride, a large missionary boat converted into a pleasure craft, and a jetty at the marina.

"I grabbed his coat and I tried to pull him up. I don't know what I thought at first," said Palmer.

"His eyes were closed. When I grabbed him, I called him two or three times. I tried to pull him out . . . but there was no way," he said.

He then tied Vincent to the jetty so his head was above the water and went to a telephone to call police after his calls for assistance were unsuccessful.

Palmer testified that he and Vincent had been drinking aboard the boat for a few hours. He said he did not see or hear Vincent fall into the water.

All the evidence has been presented and the inquest has been adjourned to Nov. 6 when the six-man jury will deliver its verdict.

Arena Firm Offers Ideas for Saanich

A private arena company's offer to discuss its Burnaby project with Saanich representatives will be taken up next week in a meeting at Saanich municipal hall.

Object of the meeting Tuesday with Columbian 4-Rinks Ltd. spokesman Alan Harris, Mayor Hugh Curtis, indoor recreation chairman Ald. Leslie Passmore and senior staff would be to exchange information on how a private arena might fill a need for more ice in the municipality.

Curtis said Wednesday night the session would be "purely exploratory" and that neigher side had a proposal to put forward.

"We want to learn more about what they are doing in Burnaby and at the same time they will canvass us on the ice surface situation," Curtis said.

Saanich council is committed to put forward at the earliest opportunity a borrowing bylaw for construction of a second public ice surface in the municipality, for which information on size, cost and location is being assembled by senior staff.

Curtis has opposed the step, although agreeing with the need for more ice, because other municipal needs take precedence, he believes.

Columbian 4-Rinks will open shortly a 2.5-acre building housing four separate NHL-size hockey rinks designed for 24-hour use 12 months of the year serving the lower mainland area.

The structure is intended to operate at a profit and at rates competitive with publicly-owned facilities, and still pay municipal taxes.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

—Andrew Lawrie and Family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DUNCAN — In loving memory of my dear uncle George Grant who passed away November 2, 1971.
Deep in our hearts your memory is kept
To love, to cherish and never forget.
—Ever remembered by his niece Mary Hughes, Helen and Robert Smith.

FOSTER — In loving memory of my dear husband who passed away on November 2, Tuesday of 1971.
The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

PSALM 23.

—Sure miss him very much. Love from his Dear Wife, Hottie

FRY — In loving memory of my dear Aunt Mary Ann Fry, who passed away Nov. 2, 1934.
—Always remembered by her niece, Mrs. R. Burton.

MORTENSEN — In loving memory of Helen Jessie Mortensen who passed away November 2, 1971.
More and more each day we miss her.
Friends may think the wound is healed;
But they little know the sorrow.
Lies within our hearts concealed.
Sadly missed and always remembered by Dad, Wilma, Marta and grandchildren.

STUDLEY — To the memory of my husband, Dad and Gramps, James George, who passed away November 2, 1964.
Quietly remembered day by day;
Sadly missed along life's way.
No longer in my life to share
But in my thoughts he is always there.
—Lovingly remembered by his wife Lillian.

INDUSTRIAL CHEMICAL SALES
We are seeking a factory sales representative for our Vancouver Island territory. Experience in chemical sales is not necessary, although a decided advantage. What is necessary is a background of successful sales work. Experience in a creative field or direct sales such as mutual funds, insurance, books, cookware, etc., would be considered ideal training, although our field is in no way related. Age is no barrier provided you've had sufficient experience. Remuneration is by way of commission, with an attractive incentive type advance arrangement. We are a western Canadian owned and operated manufacturer . . . and intensely proud of it. We are also intensely proud of our present sales force, who find our field a delightful and thoroughly enjoyable form of sales work. If you are interested, write to Bob McDougall, Guardian Chemicals, Fort Saskatchewan, Alberta. Interviews in Victoria will be arranged for the week of November 13.

$600 PER MONTH
For six month training period applicants must:
1. Be over 21 yrs. of age
2. Have late model car
3. Have successfully completed Grade 12, if under 28 years of age
4. Have a desire to earn a better than average income.

BLOCK BROS. REALTY LTD. OFFERS:
1. Prelicencing classes.
2. Excellent sales training program.
3. Good opportunity for advancement.
4. Higher earnings than you have ever enjoyed before.
5. Guaranteed income for training period.

JOIN BLOCK BROS. FANTASTIC TEAM
To enquire phone Irwin Zicker 477-1841 Block Bros. Realty.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Is Pot Smoking Injurious?

I keep reading many articles in medical journals about the dangers or lack of dangers of smoking marijuana. Experts differ, but my impression, after studying the many opinions, is that experts are coming to agree that the person who smokes occasionally is not likely to injure himself. But some studies show that excessive smoking can injure the brain and sometimes parts of the body of men.

Recently some researchers have reported finding decided injuries to the brain in both men and monkeys who were exposed to marijuana smoke. Cases have been reported in which the use of marijuana apparently killed a young person. Some British researchers studying 10 smokers of marijuana reported evidence of destruction of part of the brain.

Certainly, it would seem unwise for people to smoke much marijuana every day. A number of writers agree that one of the definitely bad things about marijuana is that it causes the person to associate with people who will not help him to be a fine and useful member of the community. Some men think that a person who smokes marijauna is more likely to use heroin later, but others deny this.

According to the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, I read that an estimated 15 to 20 million Americans are now smoking marijuana, but fortunately, over half of them smoke the drug only a few times a month.

I read that the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse, after a year's study, has decided that criminal penalties for possession and for private use of mairjuana should be abolished.

I think most people will agree that a jail sentence of several years for possessing a marijuana cigarette is far from sensible. Some students of the subject of marijuana think that hundreds of thousands of people smoke because such smoking is illegal, just as during prohibition days, many more people drank liquor than had drunk before. Certainly, our experience with alcohol should show that we cannot get rid of a drug simply by making its use illegal. However, the sale of marijuana to children in school should continue to be frowned upon by the law.

Some men have found that it is dangerous to smoke marijuana before driving a car, because then it is easier for the person to have an accident. Also, some investigators think it unwise for a woman to smoke marijuana when she is pregnant, especially in the first two months. There is the possibility that she can damage her baby.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

Drivers Share Headlines With an Ulcer

Times News Service

Two previously-obscure racing drivers and one of the sports world's most famous ulcers made most of the headlines during the 1972 auto racing season.

Emerson Fittipaldi, a 25-year-old Brazilian with only one previous Grand Prix victory to his credit, stormed to victory in five Grand Prix races to become the youngest driver in history to win the world driving championship.

In North America, George Follmer of California shook off 10 years of obscurity to win both the Can-Am and Trans-Am championships.

The ulcer knocked Stewart right out of the Can-Am series, in which he was scheduled to drive a Team McLaren car, and forced him to miss one Grand Prix race. Even Stewart does not know what effect the ulcer had on his driving in the early part of the season, but most observers felt he wasn't the Jackie Stewart of 1971, who won his second world championship in a Tyrrell-Ford.

With Stewart's health returned and a competitive new Tyrrell, he dominated the final two races of the season, easily winning the Labatt's 50 Grand Prix of Canada at Mosport Sept. 24 and, two weeks later, he led the U.S. Grand Prix at Watkins Glen from start to finish.

Stewart (45 points) and Fittipaldi (61) shared most of the laurels in Grand Prix racing in '72, winning nine of the 11 races between them. Singlehandedly, Fittipaldi won the Formula 1 Constructor's title for his JPS Lotus boss Colin Chapman.

The other Grand Prix victories went to Jean-Pierre Beltoise in a BRM at Monaco and Jacky Ickx in a Ferrari at the Nurburgring in Germany.

The Can-Am was a runaway for the L and M Porsches of Follmer and Donohue. Donohue, who won the Indy 500 in May, returned from an accident at Road Atlanta to win the Edmonton Can-Am, giving the L and M-Penske team six victories in the nine races.

Follmer finished the series with 130 points, twice that of Denis Hulme and Milt Minter, tied for second with 65.

Follmer also easily won the Trans-Am sedan championship, driving a Roy Woods-prepared AMX Javelin. He finished with 95 points. Minter was also runnerup in this series, collecting 60 points in a Firebird.

In the L and M Continental 5,000 championship, Graham McRae of New Zealand built up an overwhelming early lead in the series and held on to win with 90 points over U.S. driver Sam Posey, who had 69.

Eppie Wietzes of Toronto was fifth in the series for Formula 5,000 cars, collecting 47 points.

The 31-year-old Ottawa driver finished with 160 points to the 141 collected by Craig Hill of Mississauga, Ont. Ric in the running right up until Forest of Edmonton also was the Mosport final, finally finishing with 132 points.

The top Ontario series, the Bulova championship for Formula Fords, was won by Luke De Sadeleer of London, Ont. That series also went right down to the final race.

MT. DOUG RATES AS SWIM THREAT

Will this be the year Oak Bay is finally dethroned as champion of the annual Greater Victoria senior school swimming meet?

Oddsmakers would almost certainly favor the Bays. After all, they have piled up a remarkable splashing record, winning the Victoria crown without a miss for more than 20 years.

However, people out at Mount Douglas are hinting that their young athletes might just knock the Bays off the throne when this year's meet is held Friday at Colwood's centennial Pool.

Performances by some of the Mount Douglas boys and girls suggest that Oak Bay could be in for a rugged battle in the attempt to extend the victory streak. And there are also predictions that Belmont has an outside chance to make it a three-way fight.

Also entered in the gala are teams from Mount View, Claremont and Esquimalt. Elimination heats are scheduled from 1:30 to 4 p.m. with finals due to start at 7 p.m.

Victoria Rugby Wish Comes True

A long-standing wish has been fulfilled and Victoria now has a permanent rugby representative squad.

In previous years, the Crimson Tide has been a hastily-gathered collection of players with little or no experience working together as a unit.

And on Wednesday, a selection committee composed of Don Burgess, Derek Hyde-Lay and Tom Browne named a starting squad of 31 players from Island clubs with Alan Rees as coach.

A total of eight Tide matches has been planned, including a possible trip to Oregon.

First appearance of the Tide will be against a President's XV at 1 p.m. Nov. 11 as a preliminary to the interprovincial Canadian Carling Bowl match between Ontario and Alberta at 2:30 in Royal Athletic Park.

Selections for Crimson Tide, arranged according to club affiliation:

JAMES BAY — Hans de Goede, Casey Wall, Pete Simmons, Mick Eckhardt, Al Foster, Garry Johnston, Tom Lippa, Stu Barber, Bob Overgaard, Les Underwood.

Grid Hornets Down Mustangs

Saanich Hornets defeated James Bay Athletic Association Mustangs 17-12 Wednesday night at Royal Athletic Park to gain the sudden-death Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League final.

Hornets will meet league-champion Oak Bay Invaders for the playoff title next Wednesday on the same turf with the winner advancing to face a Mainland representative in a two-game, total-point series for the B.C. crown.

Kerry Lacroix scored two touchdowns for Hornets while Norm Baker, who also kicked a 30-yard field goal, supplied both conversions. Bernie Crump and Tom Reid scored majors for Mustangs.

Random Thoughts On Falling Leaves

The leaves of deciduous trees and shrubs have matured and are now subject to every passing wind and rain shower. Half their purpose in life is fulfilled. Now they return to earth for the completion of their life circle as soil makers for their kind.

In our gardens, we more often than not take the leaves from the place where they fall and give them to other plants. This often creates a need for fertilizing the deprived tree, or its roots will spread widely in search of what it needs.

Our deciduous (leaf-losing) trees and shrubs in nature manage very well by utilizing their own fallen leaves as they return to soil by natural composting. In woodland areas the roots cannot go wandering to find food, for other plant life will already be there as competition with their roots. Most manage to survive on the soil being constantly remade from their own residue.

Carrying this idea further just as a theory, perhaps we could prevent encroaching roots by more liberal treatment of plants known to be "hungry feeders."

Take a hedge of laurel as an example. Laurels do not shed sufficient leaves to provide enough food for the growth requirements of the hedge.

If the site has been prepared by breaking up hardpan for a distance of say, four feet each side of the planting line and 50 per cent of the whole area of soil replaced with a mixture of humusy soil plus decayed cow or horse manures and leaves, then the young laurel plants will make their roots in the prepared area.

Roots forage far afield mainly because they cannot find conditions they need close at hand. Since laurels have been used primarily for boundary hedges, we say the roots encroach into the rest of the garden, because the soil at the boundary is usually neglected.

As the plants make their growth during the year they take their nourishment from the soil, depleting its total nutrients. But how often do we think of replenishing the supply? And just as important, how often do we think of adding water to the soil below the foliage spread?

Laurels, we say, are tough plants. They will find their own moisture and food. This they do, to the detriment of nearby, less vigorous plants.

It seems reasonable to suppose that if food is available to the laurel within its own area, its roots will remain in that area instead of encroaching into the rest of the garden.

Fresh supplies of food introduced twice yearly by means of rotted compost material and old manure as two-inch surface mulches within the four-foot area allotted each side at face mulches within the four-foot area allotted each side at planting time, should, theoretically, keep the laurel roots from wandering.

Obviously, watering will be necessary to prevent the soil from becoming dry, for the mulches must be broken down, and the nutrients must be available to the roots in a soluble form.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is accepted procedure that when a defender wants his partner to lead a certain suit, that defender, at his first opportunity, will discard a high card in that suit, as a "come on" signal. But there are days when one either does not have that high card to discard, or does not know for sure which suit he wants his partner to lead. In these cases, he is forced to content himself with a "negative" signal in some other suit. Today's deal illustrates the latter type of signal.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♣.

West's opening lead of the club three was captured by South's jack, after which South promptly returned a low club. West won this trick with his ace. East now had a discard to make.

Actually, East did not know what suit he wanted his partner to lead at trick three. It was either spades or hearts, of course, whichever major suit West would help fill out. That is, whichever major suit West had a picture card in (if any), that was the suit East wanted West to lead.

And so it came to pass that at trick two West discarded the deuce of diamonds, announcing that he had no interest in diamonds being led. So, by a process of elimination, West knew that a major suit lead was called for.

West now co-operated very nicely by laying down the jack of hearts. When this card was permitted to win the trick, he continued with his remaining heart despite East's play of the heart duece on the lead of the jack. Dummy's ace captured the trick. Declarer now led a diamond to his ace, after which he cashed the diamond king and queen. The four of spades was then led to dummy's king, in the hope that West possessed the ace. But East took this trick with his ace, and cashed two more heart tricks, to hand declarer a one-trick set.

It should be noted that if West, at trick three, had elected to lead his "length" suit (spades) rather than his "quality" suit (hearts), declarer would have made two spade tricks. This would have been sufficient for him to have fulfilled his contract. But, on this day, the defense was too good, and South became the vanquished instead of the victor.

Grants Approved

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government today announced approval of grants totalling $88,372.08 to provincial cultural groups.

Horst Schmid, culture, youth and recreation minister, said the awards were granted for the 1972-1973 fiscal year.

ASIAN REFUGEES OVERESTIMATED

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of Asians who must leave Uganda by the Nov. 8 deadline set by President Idi Amin has been overestimated and Canada is "winding down" operations there.

"The fact is that the supply of people who must leave the country has pretty well dried up," W. G. Clark, chief of the immigration department's foreign service branch, said Wednesday.

"Considering estimates that ranged from 55,000 to as high as 85,000 Asians, we're beginning to see the lower figure as more realistic."

He was commenting on recent reports from Uganda that the flow of Asians seeking entry to Canada has been reduced to a trickle. This has prompted some immigration officials here to suggest that many Asians could be stalling in hopes the Nov. 8 deadline might be rescinded.

Countries who offered to take a proportion of the evicted Asians have been braced for a larger onslaught of immigrants.

As of Wednesday, Canada has issued 5,712 visas, with 200 still awaiting medical examinations and 600 applicants still to be interviewed.

U.S. officials in Kampala reported that with a week remaining before President Amin's deadline, the 1,000 places offered by the United States to stateless Asians may not be filled.

As of Tuesday, the British High Commission in Kampala reported, 27,345 British visas had been issued. Britain had originally anticipated as many as 55,000 Asian immigrants. The figure was later modified to 35,000.

Volunteers Show VD Vaccine Near

By GLENNIS ZILM

OTTAWA (CP) — Preliminary results of trials of a Canadian-developed gonorrhea vaccine are encouraging but not conclusive, Dr. Louis Greenberg said Wednesday.

The trial is being carried out by the federal health department on 62 volunteers at Inuvik, N.W.T.

But Dr. Greenberg, who developed the vaccine, said early reports support theories on how the immunity is developed. These theories also were tested last year on students in Ottawa.

None of the 54 students ever had gonorrhea but they developed antibodies in the blood that indicated they probably could withstand infections.

The Inuvik trial involves persons infected between one and seven times. Early results show these individuals do not develop the antibody changes or immune response, Dr. Greenberg said in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C.

However, these results were expected on the basis of the Ottawa study and the next step will be to develop a stronger vaccine, he said.

"The question is not whether there will be an effective vaccine. Sooner or later someone will develop it. The question is only when."

A preliminary report on the Inuvik study is to be released soon by the World Health Organization, he said.

Dr. Greenberg, former federal chief of the biologics control laboratories, has just taken over as regional adviser for biological drugs (vaccines) for Central and South American countries for the Pan American Health Organization.

The search for a gonorrhea vaccine has been stimulated in recent years by rising incidence and increasing evidence of bacterial strains resistant to antibiotics.

A recent health department report showed nearly 25,000 cases reported in Canada in 1970 and an official of the epidemiology branch has said this probably represents about one-tenth of the actual number of cases.

Gonorrhea is the most common of the reportable infectious diseases, those which should be listed with the health department so an effort can be made to track down those who may have been in contact with the disease.

Injections of the weakened bacteria are given to the individual. This vaccine will not cause the disease, but it will cause the body to develop an immunity through the antibodies.

Nixon Starts Final Spurt

WASHINGTON (CP-AP) — President Nixon will discuss the future of the country in a country-wide television address tonight, a day after Senator George McGovern told the biggest crowd of his political career he believes Americans want the country "to follow higher moral standards."

The president announced plans for a closing blitz in his campaign for re-election. There will be another television speech Monday, and campaign trips Friday and Saturday to six states — Oklahoma, North Carolina, Rhode Island, New Mexico, California and Illinois.

Even though the polls show Nixon with a wide margin over McGovern, press secretary Ronald Ziegler said: "The president is not taking any state for granted."

McGovern, Democratic nominee for president, said at a rally in New York City that "the American people in their own way are saying something that may sound old-fashioned . . . they want this country to follow higher moral standards."

The crowds that turned out Wednesday to cheer the senator revived the flagging spirits of some of the candidates' staff, dispirited by opinion polls showing him 23 percentage points or more behind Nixon.

Police estimated about 100,000 people lined the streets of Manhattan for McGovern's motorcade and rally.

Shootout Foils Holdup

WINNIPEG (CP) — Four robbery suspects were wounded in a hail of gunfire today when police, acting on a tip, interrupted a getaway attempt from a downtown credit union holdup.

Two of the four were said to be in serious condition in hospital.

The shooting began when police closed in on the rear door of the Cross town Credit Union office at 171 Donald St.

One suspect was dropped near the doorway. Two others made it to their parked getaway car where the fourth man was waiting but it crashed into a back-alley fence as police fired on the vehicle.

Police said no officers or bystanders were hurt in the gunfire but refused further comment immediately.

Mrs. Nina Wakshinski, who works in a travel agency office on the second floor of the building, said she was almost hit by bullets crashing through a window.

Indications were the police were staked out in a vehicle parked nearby.

Sheila Adam, another employee of the travel service, said she looked into the alley after the shooting started and saw three men carrying rifles and dressed like construction workers.

She first thought they were robbery suspects but as the scene unfolded she discovered they were police.

Cass-Beggs' Tenure 'Costly for Manitoba'

WINNIPEG (CP) — David Cass-Beggs, a figure of controversy as Manitoba Hydro chairman, prompted more argument with the announcement Wednesday of his plans to leave for a top job in British Columbia.

Premier Ed Schreyer said Cass-Beggs had given the people of Manitoba a "wide and important measure of service," particularly in his advice on the massive Nelson River power development.

Cass-Beggs, who was named chairman of Manitoba Hydro in 1970, will leave that post Dec. 15 to become a director of the B.C. Hydro and its chairman Jan. 1.

The Conservative Hydro critic in the Manitoba legislature, Donald Craik, reacted to the announcement by saying Cass-Beggs' tenure here has been "a very costly mistake for Manitoba."

PROBLEMS REMAIN

He said the 64-year-old Cass-Beggs, who was general manager of Saskatchewan Power Corp. before coming to Manitoba, hasn't solved the basic problems facing Manitoba Hydro and the province's NDP government.

"Now that he's made key decisions on several huge capital projects, he's leaving and he'll never have to face the consequences of those decisions."

"If he had the courage of his convictions, he'd stay and see it through — unless he feels the provincial government is not that stable," Craik said.

Cass-Beggs, was dismissed as head of Saskatchewan Power by Premier Ross Thatcher when the Liberals in 1964 ended 20 years of Saskatchewan government by the NDP's predecessor, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation.

Two officials who resigned from Manitoba Hydro in protest against Cass-Beggs' policies said the chairman's departure will open the opportunity to correct mistakes.

Douglas Campbell, a former Hydro board chairman, said the programs Cass-Beggs introduced are in seribus trouble. "Our gain is B.C.'s loss," he said.

Campbell and Kris Kristjanson, who resigned as assistant general manager of Hydro, particularly criticized the decision to delay diversion of the Churchill River through Southern Indian Lake, in favor of regulating Lake Winnipeg.

Kristjanson said that decision likely cost Manitoba about $200 million. The resignation "gives the government a rare opportunity of correcting these mistakes and it is to be hoped it will do so."

Cass-Beggs was named a consultant on Manitoba's northern power development in August, 1969, two months after the NDP came to office under Schreyer, and was named chairman of Manitoba Hydro in January, 1970.

Crash Injures Sidney Driver

Steven Roy White, of 9555 Canora, suffered a fractured leg and internal injuries when his car hit a utility pole, Sidney RCMP said.

"I am not calling for a resignation but I think the party deserves a full accounting.

Harries, who said Ivan Head had not spoken to him in the four years he served as MP for Edmonton Strathcona, was disappointed that strong Liberal candidates were caught in the anti-Trudeau feeling that spread through Alberta.

"I felt the people I was running with this time formed the strongest group I can remember. There was more pure talent in that group than in the others."

Harries said he hopes his bid for a policy conference will lead to "almost a social contract for action and . . . in specific terms."

Former dean of economics at University of Alberta, Harries said he had tried for four years to tell Trudeau his economic policies were wrong, particularly for the West.

The meeting Tuesday to call for a national policy convention was attended by defeated candidates Branny Schepanovich, Edmonton Centre; Mel Hurtig, Edmonton West; John Borger, Pembina; Allan Sulatycky, Rocky Mountain House; J. A. Barnhill, Wetaskiwin; James Ducharme, Athabasca; and a representative of Edmonton alderman Una Evans, defeated in Edmonton West.

Speaking in Ottawa, defeated Alberta cabinet minister Pat Mahoney described the outcome of Monday's voting in Alberta as "partly an anti-Trudeau vote and distinctly an anti-government vote."

"I can hardly take it personally when I wasn't the only one," said the minister of state from Calgary South riding.

. . . VIETNAM

to an end to the fighting in Vietnam.

In Paris, the Viet Cong renewed today an old Communist demand for the liquidation of all American military bases in South Vietnam.

There was no mention of United States bases in the summary of the proposed ceasefire agreement published by Hanoi two weeks ago, and it was assumed the Communists had dropped the demand in return for American abandonment of the demand for withdrawal of Hanoi's troops from South Vietnam.

It seemed likely her return to this issue was a warning that a renewed demand for withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces could put into question the Communist concession permitting maintenance of the U.S. bases by South Vietnamese troops.

In Peking, Premier Chou En-lai said the United States must bear some of the responsibility for the passing of Tuesday's deadline for the signing of a Vietnam peace agreement.

In an apparent softening of the position staked out earlier in the Chinese press, the premier said that the U.S. was "to a certain extent" encouraging Thieu in his opposition to the agreement.

Last-Minute Arms Rushed To Vietnam

Times News Services

SAIGON — The United States is rushing millions of dollars worth of military supplies to South Vietnam in a crash program to beat the signing of a ceasefire agreement.

Both the U.S. command and the 7th Air Force refused to discuss the military aid program. But informed sources said it goes well beyond the equipment originally planned for the Vietnamization schedule.

The draft peace agreement, which calls for withdrawal of all American troops from Vietnam within 60 days of signing, stipulates that the United States can replace existing military equipment only on a one-to-one basis with weapons of the same characteristics under international supervision.

Anticipating the agreement will be signed soon, the Pentagon is sending scores of transports into Saigon from bases in the United States carrying military equipment including armored personnel carriers and Chinook helicopters.

Five of the C-130s, the work horse of the Vietnam war, arrived at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Air Base Thursday. They were the first to be turned over to the South Vietnamese air force.

On the battlefront, North Vietnamese troops and tanks overran another border camp in the central highlands today as both South and North Vietnamese fought to expand their territorial control before a ceasefire.

The South Vietnamese reported nearly 150 Communist attacks during the 24 hours ending at dawn and said it was the largest number recorded in any 24-hour period of the war. But many of them were small-scale rocket and mortar barrages.

The Duc Co border camp was the third frontier base overrun in the highlands in less than a month. Scores of rangers were reported to have escaped. But the fate of 60 men who had been wounded in the fighting was not known.

Hanoi gave its first unofficial sign Wednesday that Le Duc Tho would be prepared to meet again with presidential adviser Henry Kissinger to discuss a settlement.

This clue came in an Agence France-Presse report quoting well informed sources in Hanoi as saying that the North Vietnamese government would not be opposed to a further meeting between the two negotiators.

This first sign that Hanoi had relented in its insistence that the agreement was complete came at the same time as a charge that the United States was seeking to "gain a position of strength in the negotiations."

This seemed to back up reports, also confirmed in Washington, that the United States is seeking assurances from North Vietnam that there will be some pullback of its forces in the south.

So far there has been no overt indication that North Vietnam was making any gestures that would signal a willingness to withdraw. Nor was it indicating that it would meet another key demand which U.S. sources said is being made to link cease-fires in Cambodia and Laos closely

Moving Day on The Hill

PM to Announce Decision Tonight

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau will announce the future of his Liberal government in a televised address today at 5 p.m. PDT.

His "crystal clear" decision, as he put it, was to follow day-long cabinet meetings. The cabinet also convened Wednesday for three and a half hours.

Trudeau adjourned the meeting for lunch about 1 p.m. today and announced: "We're in such a good mood we're meeting at 2:15 this afternoon.

Asked how he felt, he replied "I'm hungry."

As the cabinet met today indications were that members were sharply split on the question of whether they should resign or try to carry on.

At least three—Supply Minister James Richardson, Environment Minister Jack Davis and Pat Mahoney, minister without portfolio who went down to defeat in Calgary South—said Wednesday they felt the government should stay in office.

Others were non-commital but none suggested openly that the government should step down.

Asked today if he felt a "crisis" existed due to the closeness of the election, Trudeau replied: We're used to having crisis—that's what the whole government is about."

At one point, crushed in the throng of newsmen as he headed for the cabinet meeting, Trudeau snapped: "Hey look, I'm still the prime minister . . . don't push me like that."

Trudeau had scheduled a press conference for Wednesday but it was cancelled when he concluded he was not ready to make a declaration of his intentions at that time.

Members of the cabinet from Quebec were reported to be arguing that Trudeau should hang on to power and convene the Commons.

Others were not so sure. They were worried that if the prime minister insists on putting his minority government to the test of a want-of-confidence motion, it would appear that he was "clinging" to power. The precedent set by Louis St. Laurent who declared he had been repudiated at the polls and submitted his resignation, turning the reins of office over to John Diefenbaker, has been cited.

The standings now are 109 seats for the Conservatives, 108 for the Liberals, 30 for the New Democratic Party, 15 for Social Credit and there are two independents.

But there are at least two automatic recounts upcoming and several more recounts are expected which could change the standings in the 264-seat House.

New Democrat Party Leader David Lewis returned to Ottawa from Toronto Wednesday night.

PM Had 'Wrong Advisers'

EDMONTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau must be prepared to appear before a national Liberal convention and defend his policies, a defeated MP said today.

Hu Harries, who lost his seat in Edmonton Strathcona as part of an overwhelming Liberal defeat in Alberta, said today Trudeau has "been listening to the wrong people."

He charged that Ivan Head, Trudeau's chief adviser for Alberta, is completely out of touch with the situation in the province. The prime minister "should get rid of" the advisers who have been giving him incorrect readings.

Harries said he and seven other Alberta Liberal candidates — all beaten resoundingly as the Conservatives swept the 19 seats and dumped two Liberal cabinet ministers in the process — want an immediate policy conference.

"Many, many young people in this country thought the promise of 1968 could have been fulfilled," said Harries. "I think it will be a tragedy if the needs and wishes of those young people are not considered."

As an example of Trudeau's lack of awareness of the West, Harries said, a letter he sent from Iran sat for nine months before it was answered.

"It was signed by Pierre Elliott Trudeau," said Harries, "but I don't believe the reasoning was his.

"I'm surprised he has waited so long with these bad advisers, because he's a very bright guy."

Harries said he is not "playing a cute little game."

"The Liberal party constitution says that any convention automatically involves a call upon the leader to face the party members. I think that's

He Wanted Free Trip To Tokyo

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Fumiama, the man who claimed to be a former soldier of the Japanese army in the Second World War, appears to be a Chinese-Indonesian who wanted a free trip to Tokyo, a witness who met him in Bali said today.

The witness said "the man does not have a single shred of evidence to prove that he has been a former Japanese soldier."

Fumiama did not know the oath of a Japanese soldier and his Indonesian was far more fluent than his Japanese, the witness said.

Balinese who know Fumaiama said he is an Indonesian who has been living with a poor peasant family in a tiny village on Bali.

Early this week, Fumiama told the national news agency Antara that he was a soldier of the Japanese army and had been living in Bali for 27 years.

REFS SWORN OFF

DERBY, England (UPI) — The men who referee women's soccer games have had enough. The ladies' language is too much for them.

"The trouble is that some of the ladies do not behave like ladies," said Frank Hardwood, secretary of the 354-member Derby District Referees Society. "The language can be quite startling."

He said the society is going to train women to referee women's matches from now on.

Anita Mozeley, secretary of the Ladies Sunday (Soccer) League, admitted things got pretty tough when the girls took to the field.

COURTENAY (CP) — The father of a missionary captured by the Pathet Lao in Laos said today negotiations are going on to obtain the release of his son, Lloyd Oppel, and a companion, Sam Mattix of Centralia, Wash. Magnus Oppel also said that fears are mounting that two other missionaries captured Friday along with his son and Mattix are dead.

B.C. Pension Funds To Get Better Deal

The NDP government has released provincially guaranteed pension fund investments from the Canada Pension Plan interest rate.

Pension funds for teachers, provincial and municipal civil servants will now be able to find returns of up to one half a percentage point above the CPP rate, Premier Barrett said.

The change was made by cabinet order passed Tuesday and released today.

Barrett said the fund could now receive a "fair return" for investments made in the government-guaranteed sphere.

The move settles a long argument caused by former Premier W. A. C. Bennett's pegging of the interest rates to a lower amount in order to more easily financ the huge power projects of the Peace and Columbia rivers.

One of Bennett's constant critics on the matter, Liberal Pat McGeer, said in Vancouver the teachers and civil servant funds were "captive" funds" under Bennett.

He argued over a number of years that hydro should be forced to seek money on the open market and that the pension funds should not be forced into paying for power projects.

Schools and hospitals were made the "whipping boys" for the high cost of power dam construction, McGeer said.

The tying of the interest rates to the CPP rates was done in April, 1970, after several years of heavy financing of power projects.

The NDP government's cabinet order rescinded the 1970 move. Barrett said today before entering cabinet that he expected a "companion" order in council would likely be passed today and released tomorrow.

POWERFUL N-TEST

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — The Uppsala Seismology Institute registered a very strong Soviet nuclear test today equal in strength to the American blast in the Aleutian Islands a year ago, Prof. Marcus Baath of the institute reported.

Baath said the explosion occurred in the Siberian test area and had a strength of about five megatons and a Richter magnitude of 7.1.

Four Hell's Angels Arrested

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — Four Hell's Angels have been taken into custody and authorities say more arrests are possible in connection with the discovery of three bodies on a remote ranch rumored to be a burial ground for the motorcycle gang.

Those arrested Wednesday were identified as William Mark (Zoro) Mitten, 32; Edward Junior Carter, 24; Chester (Festus) Green, 29, and William John Moran, 38.

Contra Costa County officials said the four were being held in the San Francisco Bay area county for investigation of murder.

"We have good cause to believe the suspects in the Contra Costa jail are linked with the Mendicino investigation and there is good cause to believe the crimes occurred in Contra Costa County," said District Attorney William O'Malley. "More arrests are possible."

Meanwhile, George Wethern, 33, and his wife Helen, 29, owners of the 153-acre ranch where the bodies of two men and a woman were unearthed from old well holes, rejected Wednesday an offer of immunity from further prosecution if they would provide information concerning Hell's Angels activities in the area.

"It wasn't broad enough they didn't offer what we feel was sufficient," said public defender Joseph Allen of the offer by Mendicino County authorities.

Wethern, a burly 260-pounder, and his wife—both former Hell's Angels—were arrested on charges of possession and sale of drugs Monday when deputies went to their ranch to dig.

Allen said authorities particularly want information from the Wetherns on Hell's Angels leader Sonny Barger, 34, and others who are on trial with Barger in Oakland on charges of killing a suspected narcotics dealer last May.

Six witnesses are said to be missing in the trial.

PARIS, BONN HIKE RATES

Times News Services

In Paris, France raised its rate to 6.5 from 5.75 per cent and Bonn increased its bank rate to 4 from 3½ per cent.

British Capture IRA Guerillas

BELFAST (AP) — A battalion of British troops swept into a Roman Catholic district of Belfast late Wednesday night and captured a suspected cadre of Irish Republican Army guerrillas.

Army headquarters said they believed an IRA battalion commander, three other officers and four active gunmen were seized.

Russia's Far-Flung Navy Linked by Satellites

New York Times

MOSCOW — Indications mounted Wednesday that the Soviet Union may be deploying a worldwide system of data relay satellites linking its wide-flung naval forces with Moscow.

For the fifth time in the last 30 months, the Russians Wednesday launched a set of eight satellites with a single carrier rocket as part of its Cosmos series, a general designation for a wide range of civilian and military unmanned space activities. The last eight-payload cluster was launched in July.

Western specialists on the Soviet space program have found increasing evidence that the Soviet program of eight-payload shots is designed to provide a global military communications system similar to one tested over the last six years by the U.S. air force. Since the only worldwide military activities of the Soviet Union are those of its navy, the Soviet eight-satellite system is believed to be used primarily for naval communications.

As usual in the Cosmos program, the Soviet announcement gave no indication of the purpose of the new Satellites. The announcement by Tass said merely that the cluster had been placed in a high circular orbit, 928 miles at its highest point and 854 miles at its lowest, and inclined at an angle of 74 degrees to the earth's equator. The satellites were completing an orbit every 114 minutes.

These are the characteristics of a series of octet launchings that began in April, 1970, and were then hailed by the Russians as the world's first flight of eight payloads with a single-launch vehicle.

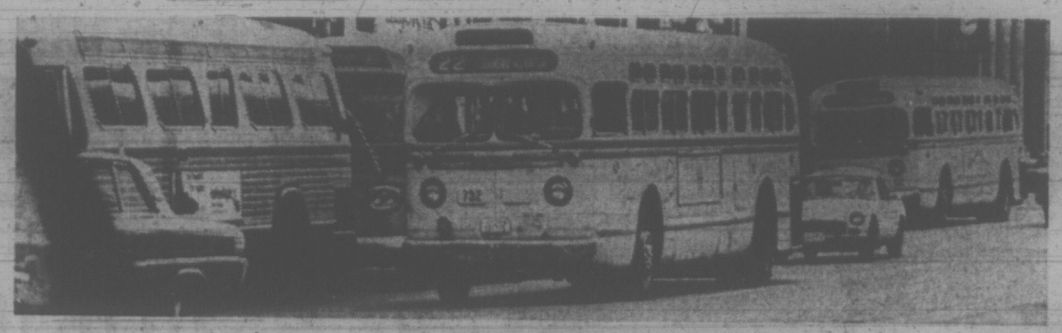
LORIMER
. . . more buses

Ideal Aim: Freedom From Automobile



Urban transit: concrete answers from Ottawa awaited

Election Confuses Transit Issue

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Canada's post-election political confusion has left Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer wondering if B.C. can pin any hopes on an Ottawa assurance of "substantial" federal funds for urban transit expansion.

But, in an interview Wednesday, Lorimer said the first stage of the provincial government's program for improving and developing public transportation will definitely go ahead — whether or not the federal assistance is forthcoming.

This first phase, Lorimer said, will be to provide more buses "as quickly as possible" for B.C. Hydro's services in Victoria, Vancouver and elsewhere on the Lower Mainland.

How quickly, he wouldn't say, but pointed out that it takes at least 10 months to a year for new buses to be delivered. And he isn't placing any orders "this week."

Lorimer said in recent correspondence with federal urban affairs minister Ron Basford he received an indication that the Liberal government would help finance the upgrading of provincial transportation systems.

This was as it should be because, like roads and bridges which also received federal funds, transit is a responsibility of Ottawa as well as a local and provincial responsibility.

"I had hoped to be able to get some concrete proposals and get together with the minister so he could spell out exactly what he was referring to in this field," Lorimer said.

"My problem is that now I don't know who the minister is, or will be, or if he will be minister for very long . . ."

Lorimer said the second phase of the transit program will be to study the whole question of whether there is a need for "a more sophisticated type of transportation system" in the larger centres such as Vancouver.

"Without any study I don't think, personally, there is a need in the immediate future," he said.

Whatever service is provided, it remains to be settled who would operate it — Hydro the provincial government, regional districts or some type of Crown corporation with representation from the local areas.

"That's open to discussion; we don't really care who runs it," Lorimer said, adding that the provincial government is not hung-up on the principle that transit must be run at a profit.

"We appreciate the fact that it is going to cost the provincial government a fair amount of money but we think it is our responsibility to provide this."

In any case, he noted, there would be a saving to cities in the long term because they would be spared "the criss-cross of freeways which destroys a city both socially and from the aesthetic point of view."

The minister reflected that the ideal to aim for will be a public transit system that is good enough to break British Columbians free from their reliance on and faithful attachment to the automobile.

"We've been glued to our cars for an awful long time and it's going to take almost a shot of dynamite to get us out of them," he added.

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

Commissioned by the Socred government and supervised by former deputy travel minister Ron Worley, the film was nearly finished when the Socreds were crushed in the September election. Worley was fired by the NDP government.

Now the 30-minute movie, called A Long Road Back, sits on a shelf in a stack of cans — "Finished" in a different sense unless the new government approves $3,000 for its completition.

The film was supposed to be financed by a grant from another Socred brainchild, the Drug, Alcohol and Cigarette Education, Prevention and Rehabilitation Fund.

However, few of the bills have been paid and Vancouver film-maker Ray Purdy is in the red for most of the film's costs.

"The music and the final mix need doing, that's all," Purdy told the Times. "I certainly hope the new government decides to finish it soon."

Fund co-ordinator Peter Battison, an ex-Saanich policeman who took the job earlier this year, says the film would be circulated free to B.C. schools when ready for screening.

He said the film was made entirely on location in Victoria featuring local students, housewives and a Victoria psychiatrist. Journalist Bill Thomas and Worley were in charge, with Purdy handling production.

Prudy said A Long Road Back shows a girl in hospital following a "bad trip" resulting from an overdose of an unnamed drug. The film shows the pressures from the girl's peers and problems at home, and indicates the problem of recovering.

BATTISON
. . . 'winner' loses

It ends on a positive note as the girl, who has described her memories through poetry, leaves mental hospital and reacts to the sounds, sights and smells of the outside world.

A Long Road Back is designed for secondary school students.

"I think it's going to be a winner," Battison commented.

Education department official John Meredith said he understood all special funds set up by the former government were under review in the normal course of government takeover by a new regime.

Aldermen Hassle Open Space Dude

Victoria Times
THURSDAY, NOV. 2, 1972 11
SECOND SECTION

Open Space may be a centre for cultural activities in Old Town, but for one city alderman the name conjures up visions of those wide vistas down on the range.

When Open Space director Gene Miller applied today for a $9,100 grant from city council, finance committee chairman Ald. Tom Christie questioned him like this:

"Is this your brainchild? What is it? I'm thinking of wide open spaces . . . there's a song to that effect I believe."

★

Miller, who two weeks ago submitted an 18-page brief explaining the background, activities and aims of the centre at 506 and 510 Fort Street, claimed that in the 18 months Open Space had been operating it had made "a valuable contribution" to Victoria's cultural life.

The committee eventually recommended refusal of the grant application, but not before Christie — occasionally supported by Ald. Harold Olafson — had given Miller a thorough questioning session.

Christie wanted to know why the city should approve "a great big whopping grant like this," when its work was cut out trying to help such established cultural organizations as the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

★

And Olafson said he couldn't understand why Open Space didn't join forces with a group such as the Bastion Theatre.

To that, Miller replied the reason was that the two organizations were not performing the same functions.

Christie also asked about Miller's background, and Miller answered he was a landed immigrant from New York.

Miller told the committee every effort was made to appeal to a wide range of interests in the activities arranged at Open Space, and to avoid it becoming a focus for the young "and the long-hairs, because I think that would be the death of the project."

Public Given Lakes Access

Highways Minister Bob Strachan has turned down requests by the YM-YWCA's Camp Thunderbird Society and the Boy Scouts to cut off public access to Glintz and Young Lakes in Sooke.

The two organizations had asked the highways department to close part of Glintz Lake Road and Young Lake Road to prevent outsiders going through their camps in the area to reach the lakes.

Strachan said Wednesday he made his decision on the recommendation of department officials.

★ ★ ★

Strachan had earlier said he was against such closures.

On Wednesday he added that, instead of closures, he hoped to make more recreation areas available to the public.

As required by law, the department advertised a notice of closure Sept. 19. People wishing to make submissions in writing had until Oct. 16 to do so.

Strachan reported that the submissions received were 20 to one against the closures.

Q. If an old-age-pensioner decided to go back to England to live permanently after 45 years in Canada could she still receive the Canadian old age pension and where do you apply for the information for the same? — B.L.B.

A. If you are now receiving the pension and have resided in Canada for 25 years after your 21st birthday you can continue to receive the cheques indefinitely. If you are now receiving the cheques but do not meet the residence requirements then the pension is only payable for the month of departure plus six additional months. After that time payment is suspended until you return to Canada.

However, if you are not currently receiving the pension and leave the country before you are 65 you may only receive the cheques if you resided in Canada for 40 years after your 18 birthday before leaving. You can apply for the pension from abroad. There are various other detailed requirements to be met in the latter case.

Mayor's Trip Up in Air After Vote

Victoria's finance committee today recommended approval of an estimated $500 expenses for Mayor Peter Pollen to attend the first-ever tri-level conference on urban affairs, scheduled for Nov. 20 and 21 in Toronto.

But city manager Bill Hooson told the committee that in view of the confused political situation resulting from the election, no one knows whether the meeting will be cancelled.

The invitation to attend came from the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

Appeal Goes to Youth As Campaign Falls Shy

United Appeal organizers may fall back on high school student helpers to try to collect the $328,000 target by closing date Nov. 15.

Chairman Shirley Dowell announced the closing date along with figures showing that the charity campaign is lagging seriously with only 43.5 per cent — $148,000 — of the target donated.

The campaign still needs 300 canvassers to cover Colwood, Langford, Burnside, Marigold, Tulip and Central Saanich. "So many people were out knocking on doors in both the recent elections it's been hard to get them out again," Mrs. Dowell said.

She said she was considering approaching school principals about getting student helpers.

Another major problem facing the appeal is collectors failing to pick up and return donation "kits." Kits, containing envelopes, blank cheques, receipts, etc., are circulated by collectors to potential donors. A second call is then made to pick up the donations.

"There is no doubt that money is sitting in these kits waiting to be picked up," Mrs. Dowell said.

She warned that any shortfall in the appeal would have to be shouldered by the 24 participating agencies, which may be required to reduce their budgets, she said.

She said individual agencies might decide to revert to the former practice of conducting their own campaigns.

Mrs. Dowell said Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall had written to her supporting the campaign. She said Victoria Labor Council had also endorsed the appeal.

Vancouver's campaign has reached 65 per cent of its target, an "acceptable" figure, she said.

Police Press Probe Of Pins in Apples

A detective said it has been learned where the apples came from, but not the pins. He did not wish to comment further but did say no charges are contemplated at this stage.

Discovery of the pins was made Wednesday when Mrs. George Turner, 929 Empress, began to make an apple pie. There was a sharp pin in each apple, embedded head first and so deeply the points were under the skin.

George Turner accompanied his three children on Halloween rounds last year because he had heard of stories of apples containing razor blades. But he couldn't go with the children this year because he was working.

Police have asked parents to check thoroughly for pins and similar items in Halloween handouts.

Best Missions Were Flights of Fancy

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

"Authors should be read and not seen."

So says aviation author Ernest K. Gann. He was in Victoria Wednesday evening, addressing the Air Transport Association of Canada's wind-up banquet.

"Most of my characters are young, curly-haired, almost seven feet tall and very dashing," he said.

"Well, you see me as I am. Nothing can fulfill the human imagination."

Gann, 62, ex-pilot and author of The High and The Mighty, Fat Is The Hunter and other air adventures, lives in semiretirement on his 200-acre farm at Friday Harbor in the San Juans.

He laughs at reports he is the wealthiest pilot since Howard Hughes, insists he has to keep writing to make ends meet.

★ ★ ★

However, six of his 13 novels are now successful movies and his books sell briskly at $7 a copy.

Gann flew over 15,000 hours with the U.S. Air Transport Command during World War Two and used his war experiences for his early novels.

He still flies a twin-engined amphibious Royal Gull about 400 hours a year for business and pleasure.

In his address to the four-day ATAC annual meeting at the Empress Hotel, Gann said he suspected he was invited because of his books, not his aerial proficiency.

That was all right with him because he was very high on books. He quoted the school child who wrote: "A book can make you laugh or cry. Nothing else so small can do so much."

He said he was probably invited because of his adventures as a Zeppelin commander in London during World War One. He recalled a mission in 1916 . . . dropping bombs here-and-there and being awarded an Iron Cross for each successful hit.

The arithmetic says he was seven years old at the time.

Some of his best missions, he said, were flights of fancy.

Turning to the real world of flying, he recalled an early civilian airline route where he was pilot of a four-engined plane that flew all right at 3,000 feet. Above that level the engines conked out.

"Not all at the same time, you understand. First this one and then that one. They would eventually come back on. They were all rugged individualists."

Of such stuff was born The High and the Mighty, a story of a plane in trouble.

Turning to the present, Gann warned the airline officials not to be too smug about air service today. In some cases, he said, people flew from Toronto to Montreal 30 years ago in half the time it takes today.

"In those days time used to be spent in flying toward the destination rather than circling over it."

And the future?

Within a decade, he predicted, atomic or rocket-assisted takeoffs will be in regular use on conventional aircraft. He says normal cruising altitudes of 150,000 feet will be common, and unconventional fuels will be in use.

Gann said the speed-up of air travel has broken down the barriers between nations, a mixed blessing.

★ ★ ★

"The safeguards of distance are gone. Now we must be friends with every neighbor or our very expertise will bring catastrophe."

He said politicians and heads of state should spend at least 100 hours aloft a year.

Then, he said, there might be some hope they would look at the world with a new understanding and resolve that all nations must live in peace.

Putting Woman 'In Her Place'

EDMONTON (CP) — A philosophy of womanhood that emphasizes a supportive rather than a competitive relationship with men as a means of achieving happiness in marriage is being offered through a course called Fascinating Womanhood.

Based on the book of the same name by Californian Helen B. Andelin, the course has been offered privately and through the YWCA in Edmonton several times in the last year.

Marjory Hunt, prime organizer of the Edmonton project, says the course has been widely available in the United States for several years and there are thousands of adherents to the philosophy.

Mrs. Hunt, 30, married for eight years and mother of two, said she took the course for self improvement three years ago and it helped open doors to understanding her role as a woman.

Fulfilling Role

"The course helps a woman gain fulfillment in her role as a woman — wife, mother and homemaker," she said in an interview.

"Men and women are like a lock and a key — they are of equal worth but fulfill a different purpose."

The course is based on a fill-in-the-blanks workbook of eight lessons liberally sprinkled with quotations from women whose marriages have been helped by the course.

The workbook expresses Fascinating Womanhood philosophies such as:

● "Men must take their place in the world of men.

They have battles to win, mountains to climb, and rivers to cross. Let him live his life as his duties and desires demand."

● "Although a woman should always place her husband No. 1 on her life, a man cannot always do this. Often his work and responsibility away from home must come first."

● "Man has an innermost need to be the leader. It is his right by divine commandment and also by logic. It is unfeminine for a woman to usurp the leadership position."

● "Let him be the breadwinner. Work only in compelling emergencies. Do your part by being feminine, living your feminine role, and helping him to feel superior in his masculine role."

● "Yield consistently and unreservedly, whether you agree with him or not. Otherwise, his position of leadership means nothing to him."

● "We have a challenge before us in undoing mistakes in the past. The battle for equality of the sexes has led us into confusion and unhappiness and needs to end for a greater effort — that of restoring womanhood ot its rightful position."

Mrs. Hunt said: "The course doesn't pretend to save marriages, but it has helped provide women with a pattern for happines."

"I'm not against women's liberation but think many women's lib types are going about it in the wrong way — trying to compete with men instead of fulfilling themselves as women."

The Fascinating Womanhood course was offered last summer at the Edmonton YWCA at the same time as a course called Second Look which offers women professional counselling and self-analysis to help them decide on their interests outside the home.

Reinforce Values

"People seem to take courses that reinforce their own values. Most of the FW group probably had already decided to stay at hom and not work, while those taking the Second Look course had probably already decided to seek alternative activities."

She said the fact that both types of courses designed specifically for women have had such good response shows that many women are unhappy and are seeking help through courses to find some kind of fulfillment.

Schools 'Add to Stress'

OTTAWA (CP) — Schools may be guilty of adding to the stresses of life rather than teaching students to face them, Norman Goble, secretary-general of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, said this week.

In the closing address at a two-day national conference on school health, Mr. Goble said: "There is room for immediate improvement in many schools in the reduction of unnecessary stress, to make them less detrimental to the physical, emotional and mental health of the student."

The Ottawa educationist said he was not referring only to the physical environment of the school, although the "old familiar questions" about lighting, ventilation and "the dietary influence of the soft drink machine" also are important.

"But what we have not given nearly enough thought to is the nature of the school as an over-all daily environment during 12 of the most important years of life."

During the final sessions delegates said the school must be concerned with physical and emotional development of the child "from Grades kindergareten to 13" and also with delivery of care through such programs as immunization.

"There's no reason these couldn't be extended to dental and visual services, too," said Mr. Goble. However, he added, these generally are considered a family responsibility.

Health Food Claims Shot Down by Expert

VANCOUVER (CP) — So-called "health foods" are neither safer nor more nutritious than any other food, says the president of the Canadian Institute of Food Science and Technology.

Dr. James F. Richards, an associate professor of food science at the University of British Columbia, said in an interview this week that too often people are scared away from the ordinary food on market shelves by misinformation spread by food faddists.

"If people want to eat organic food, that's fine," said Dr. Richards. "But I'm against those who delude others into believing organic food is either safer or nutritionally superior to the food you buy at your local store. It is not the case. My personal view is that toxicity of organic health foods is probably higher and therefore less safe."

Dr. Richards said the time has come for professionals in the food sciences to give the facts on a regular basis. He said "there's a tremendous pool of information" among such organizations as his own institute, and the Canadian nutrionists, dieticians, and health science bodies, as well as those in agriculture.

He said the lack of general knowledge that any food can create a health risk has caused many consumers "to over-react" when confronted with health food arguments.

"Some people like to make statements that additives in commercial food are poisonous. Well, flourides are poison. Most chemicals are if used wrongly. Unfortunately, the consumer is rarely in a position to get into the (scientific) details of this. So the only thing we can do is lay the facts on the line."

Dr. Richards said the amount of additives in foods is being continually reviewed in Canada by the health protection branch of the Department of Health and Welfare. "They don't permit any additives unless they have some significant advantage to the consumer."

Tooth Reimplanted

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A leading dentist says there's something you can do if your child knocks out a tooth — find it fast.

"If you get the child and the tooth to the dentist within half an hour, there's a good chance it can be reimplanted," he told newsmen at the society meeting.

"Tell the dentist it's an emergency," added Dr. Roy L. Lindahl, who is succeeding Posnick. "If the dentist is any good at all, he'll get up in the middle of the night and meet you at the office."

Last-Minute Arms Rushed To Vietnam

Times News Services

SAIGON — The United States is rushing millions of dollars worth of military supplies to South Vietnam in a crash program to beat the signing of a ceasefire agreement.

Both the U.S. command and the 7th Air Force refused to discuss the military aid program. But informed sources said it goes well beyond the equipment originally planned for the Vietnamization schedule.

The draft peace agreement, which calls for withdrawal of all American troops from Vietnam within 60 days of signing, stipulates that the United States can replace existing military equipment only on a one-to-one basis with weapons of the same characteristics under international supervision.

Anticipating the agreement will be signed soon, the Pentagon is sending scores of transports into Saigon from bases in the United States carrying military equipment including armored personnel carriers and Chinook helicopters.

Five of the C-130s, the work horse of the Vietnam war, arrived at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Air Base today. They were the first to be turned over to the South Vietnamese air force.

On the battlefront, North Vietnamese troops and tanks overran another border camp in the central highlands today as both South and North Vietnamese fought to expand their territorial control before a ceasefire.

The South Vietnamese reported nearly 150 Communist attacks during the 24 hours ending at dawn and said it was the largest number recorded in any 24-hour period of the war. But many of them were small-scale rocket and mortar barrages.

The Duc Co border camp was the third frontier base overrun in the highlands in less than a month. Scores of rangers were reported to have escaped. But the fate of 60 men who had been wounded in the fighting was not known.

Hanoi gave its first unofficial sign Wednesday that Le Duc Tho would be prepared to meet again with presidential adviser Henry Kissinger to discuss a settlement.

This clue came in an Agence France-Presse report quoting well informed sources in Hanoi as saying that the North Vietnamese government would not be opposed to a further meeting between the two negotiators.

This first sign that Hanoi had relented in its insistence that the agreement was complete came at the same time as a charge that the United States was seeking to "gain a position of strength in the negotiations."

This seemed to back up reports, also confirmed in Washington, that the United States is seeking assurances from North Vietnam that there will be some pullback of its forces in the south.

So far there has been no overt indication that North Vietnam was making any gestures that would signal a willingness to withdraw. Nor was it indicating that it would meet another key demand which U.S. sources said is being made to link cease-fires in Cambodia and Laos closely

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Luc Pepin, industry and commerce minister, today was declared elected in Drummond riding with a five-vote margin, giving the Liberals 109 seats in the Commons and tying them with the Progressive Conservatives.

The revised result was announced by Drummond returning officer Lucien Gamache.

Pepin's re-election, which is subject to automatic recount probably next week, takes a seat from the Social Credit party and reduces its standing to 14.

PM Announces Plans Tonight

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau will announce the future of his Liberal government in a televised address today at 5 p.m. PST.

His "crystal clear" decision, as he put it, was to follow day-long cabinet meetings. The cabinet also convened Wednesday for three and a half hours.

Trudeau adjourned the meeting for lunch about 1 p.m. today and announced: "We're in such a good mood we're meeting at 2:15 this afternoon.

Asked how he felt, he replied "I'm hungry."

As the cabinet met today indications were that members were sharply split on the question of whether they should resign or try to carry on.

At least three—Supply Minister James Richardson, Environment Minister Jack Davis and Pat Mahoney, minister without portfolio who went down to defeat in Calgary South—said Wednesday they felt the government should stay in office.

Others were non-commital but none suggested openly that the government should step down.

Asked today if he felt a "crisis" existed due to the closeness of the election, Trudeau replied: "We're used to having crisis—that's what the whole government is about."

At one point, crushed in the throng of newsmen as he headed for the cabinet meeting, Trudeau snapped: "Hey look, I'm still the prime minister . . . don't push me like that."

Trudeau had scheduled a press conference for Wednesday but it was cancelled when he concluded he was not ready to make a declaration of his intentions at that time.

Members of the cabinet from Quebec were reported to be arguing that Trudeau should hang on to power and convene the Commons.

PM Had 'Wrong Advisers'

EDMONTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau must be prepared to appear before a national Liberal convention and defend his policies, a defeated MP said today.

Hu Harries, who lost his seat in Edmonton Strathcona as part of an overwhelming Liberal defeat in Alberta, said today Trudeau has "been listening to the wrong people."

He charged that Ivan Head, Trudeau's chief adviser for Alberta, is completely out of touch with the situation in the province. The prime minister "should get rid of" the advisers who have been giving him incorrect readings.

Harries said he and seven other Alberta Liberal candidates — all beaten resoundingly as the Conservatives swept the 19 seats and dumped two Liberal cabinet

REFS SWORN OFF

DERBY, England (UPI) — The men who referee women's soccer games have had enough. The ladies' language is too much for them.

"The trouble is that some of the ladies do not behave like ladies," said Frank Hardwood, secretary of the 354-member Derby District Referees Society. "The language can be quite startling."

He said the society is going to train women to referee women's matches from now on.

"Although the ladies' keeness is commendable," he said, "referees who officiate at their matches rarely want to do so again."

Anita Mozeley, secretary of the Ladies Sunday (Soccer) League, admitted things got pretty tough when the girls took to the field.

B.C. Pension Funds To Get Better Deal

Pension funds for teachers, provincial and municipal civil servants will now be able to get a better return on their money.

Funds will now be able to seek interest of up to half a percentage point above the CPP rate.

Barrett said the fund could now receive a "fair return" for investments made in the government-guaranteed sphere.

The move settles a long argument caused by former Premier W. A. C. Bennett's pegging of the interest rates to a lower amount in order to more easily finanec the huge power projects of the Peace and Columbia rivers.

One of Bennett's constant critics on the matter, Liberal Pat McGeer, said in Vancouver the teachers and civil servant funds were "captive" funds" under Bennett.

He argued over a number of years that hydro should be forced to seek money on the open market and that the pension funds should not be forced into paying for power projects.

Schools and hospitals were made the "whipping boys" for the high cost of power dam construction, McGeer said.

The tying of the interest rates to the CPP rates was done in April, 1970, after several years of heavy financing of power projects.

The NDP government's cabinet order rescinded the 1970 move. Barrett said today before entering cabinet that he expected a "companion" order in council would likely be passed today and released tomorrow.

Four Hell's Angels Arrested

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — Four Hell's Angels have been taken into custody and authorities say more arrests are possible in connection with the discovery of three bodies on a remote ranch rumored to be a burial ground for the motorcycle gang.

Those arrested Wednesday were identified as William Mark (Zoro) Mitten, 32; Edward Junior Carter, 24; Chester (Festus) Green, 29, and William John Moran, 38.

Contra Costa County officials said the four were being held in the San Francisco Bay area county for investigation of murder.

"We have good cause to believe the suspects in the Contra Costa jail are linked with the Mendicino investigation and there is good cause to believe the crimes occurred in Contra Costa County," said District Attorney William O'Malley. "More arrests are possible."

Meanwhile, George Wethern, 33, and his wife Helen, 29, owners of the 153-acre ranch where the bodies of two men and a woman were unearthed from old well holes, rejected Wednesday an offer of immunity from further prosecution if they would provide information concerning Hell's Angels activities in the area.

"It wasn't broad enough they didn't offer what we feel was sufficient," said public defender Joseph Allen of the offer by Mendicino County authorities.

Wethern, a burly 260-pounder, and his wife—both former Hell's Angels—were arrested on charges of possession and sale of drugs Monday when deputies went to their ranch to dig.

Allen said authorities particularly want information from the Wetherns on Hell's Angels leader Sonny Barger, 34, and others who are on trial with Barger in Oakland on charges of killing a suspected narcotics dealer last May.

Six witnesses are said to be missing in the trial.

In Paris, France raised its rate to 6.5 from 5.75 per cent and Bonn increased its bank rate to 4 from 3½ per cent.

British Capture IRA Guerrillas

BELFAST (AP) — A battalion of British troops swept into a Roman Catholic district of Belfast late Wednesday night and captured a suspected cadre of Irish Republican Army guerrillas.

Army headquarters said they believed an IRA battalion commander, three other officers and four active gunmen were seized.

Russia's Far-Flung Navy Linked by Satellites

New York Times

MOSCOW — Indications mounted Wednesday that the Soviet Union may be deploying a worldwide system of data relay satellites linking its wide-flung naval forces with Moscow.

For the fifth time in the last 30 months, the Russians Wednesday launched a set of eight satellites with a single carrier rocket as part of its Cosmos series, a general designation for a wide range of civilian and military unmanned space activities. The last eight-payload cluster was launched in July.

Western specialists on the Soviet space program have found increasing evidence that the Soviet program of eight-payload shots is designed to provide a global military communications system similar to one tested over the last six years by the U.S. air force. Since the only worldwide military activities of the Soviet Union are those of its navy, the Soviet eight-satellite system is believed to be used primarily for naval communications.

As usual in the Cosmos program, the Soviet announcement gave no indication of the purpose of the new satellites. The announcement by Tass said merely that the cluster had been placed in a high circular orbit, 928 miles at its highest point and 854 miles at its lowest, and inclined at an angle of 74 degrees to the earth's equator. The satellites were completing an orbit every 114 minutes.

These are the characteristics of a series of octet launchings that began in April, 1970, and were then hailed by the Russians as the world's first flight of eight payloads with a single-launch vehicle.
